The dry dock purchased by Messrs. Fraser & Lewis still lies unused below Cataraqui Bridge. The Belleville papers think the la rosse match on Mouday should have been finished, the expenses of the visitors being promised and their passages home by midnight train provided being for. The cessation of play was in accordance with agreement. It is to be regretted that there was not time for the completion of the match, but why make conditions unless they are adhered to? The Intelligencer states that the Okas, in individual cases played best; that the Earls as a team played most scientifigreater powers of endurance; that at the end of the play the Kingstonians were most distressed. The opinion is given for what it is worth. When the clubs meet on August 9th the question of endurance will be settled. Had the Earls not developed unexpected strength and won the only game played they would have received gentler treatment from the Belleville press. Statements have been published of an ungenerous and unmerited character. It has not been our practice to say spiteful things of a visit ing club when it proved victorious. we did the cordulity of our relations with other places would be of small ac

Mingston Not Degenerating.

A writer on the Belleville Ontario says anent the criticism of the Oswego Ex press regarding Kingston, that "our re collection of Kingston does not extend so far back as 40 years ago, but when we stretch it to the utmost extension and compare the two ends we must confess that the old city has not degenerated. On the contrary Kingston has made substantial progress in many ways, and we believe a larger and safer business now transacted by her merchants and business men generally than at any previous period of her history. A large number of very fine private residences have been erected, and the city otherwise improved. But we cannot praise the sidewalks. They are generally a disgrace to the place."

A Nice Mayor. At the very hour to-day that the County Judge and Police Magistrace were doing their best to bring to justice the perpetrators of the harbor outrage, Mayor Gaskin, nominally Chief Magistrate, was indulging in his periodical threats of personal violence against newspaper men who won't fall down and worship him. What can be expected from the people generally in the face of examples set so often by the head of the municipality? Can the police conscientiously arrest men for threatening the peace when they know that the Mayor

A HARBOUR OUTRAGE.

TWO NON-UNION MEN TAKER OFF VESSEL, TIED, BEATEN AND NEAR-LY DROWNED.

An Outrage Which Must be Punished Possible-Lite and Limb Must be He-Disown Connection with It.

Last night an outrage of a very serious character occurred in the harbor. The facts, as made public, have caused vessel was consigned to the Kingston and Montreal Forwarding Company and anchored off the wharf awaiting her turn to be discharged. During the evening there were rumors of brewing mischief. About ten o'clock several "dingies" shot out from the wharf, containing some say sixteen, others say thirteen desperate men. They rowed for the schr. Higgie his first intimation of the attack was when the gang appeared on the deck of the vessel. He was in the cabin and coming to the door asked what was wanted. He was informed by a hard looking fellow, who garnished his speech with foul oaths, that they intended to have a "matinee," (an American expression for a row.) The Captain said that it was a strange hour for such an affair. The gang then asked for the crew, saying they were prepared for consequences; they would take chances. The Captain, being unprovided with a weapon, could te escape to the cabin. Here they hid latter and threw them overboard. themselves in a store room. The sailors' names were Albert Moore and James injured as to be forced to seek hospital Ellis. The visitors were not inclined to leave the vessel without the men they were after. They were bound to be minute in their search, and so made a rush for the cabin. They met with re sistance from the Captain, who held the door. They smashed it in, entered the cabin and ransacked it, knocking over every thing and leaving the place in a state of great disorder. They were determined to secure the sailers and even went so far as to peer beneath the Cap-

They were then hoisted into a "dingie" and carried off towards shallow water, where the two unfortunates were thrown overboard repeatedly punished under the water, and struck on the head. More dead than alive they were finally taken ashore, beaten black and blue, and deserted. Ellis and Moore, wounded and bleeding, found their way cally; that the Okas possessed the towards the city park, where they remained for a time, but, were chased later in the night by the same cowardly crew who had committed the previous outrage. They ran about the city, followed by the "looters," and only after much trouble found shelter until the THE WOUNDS VERY SERIOUS.

Both men have been badly injured. Ellis' nose being pounded out of shape The wounds of one continued to bleed all night and late into to day. The affair is one of the most disgraceful events that has ever occurred in the harbour, and every possible endeavor should be made to capture the offenders. For the sake of this city's good name $1,000 should be offered as a reward for the capture of them. The affair was un loubtedly carried out by Union men, as telegrams are said to have been sent here, asking that the Higgie's crew be "cleaned out." At this time the har bour is very full of American vessels and it is believed that the assailants were from Toledo and Chicago vessels. WHAT PRESIDENT CROWLEY SAYS. The President of the Seamen's Union was interviewed, and said that the Kingston Union was in no way responsible for the outrage. He was unaware of the occurrence until this morning So far as the Kingston sailors are concerned they have been all at work, and have not been required "to pull any vessel. He had neither received nor heard of telegrams being sent from western parts, urging an attack on the Higgie's crew. The fact that the men declared that they "wanted to have a matineo," goes to show that they were familiar with such things. People may imagine we are attempting to condone Kingstonians, but we are not. If they were implicat ed in the affair we would be glad to see them punished. They richly deserve

When she anchored out in the stream the police could not see what service they could render and reported at the police station. They thought the schoon er was safe, lying out in the stream, and so, it appears, did the captain, else he would not have let the mates and two of the crew go ashore, taking with them the vessel's boat. The attack appears to have been carefully planned and circumstances favoured those engaged in it.
