HE COULD WRITE "LIAR." An Episode in a Boy's Life-A Parallel Love to Kingston-What is Called Accomplishment.

If anyone on reading this piece cannot ee a close resemblance in the story to the editor of the Daily News we will be happy to give as a forfeit 100 dodgers,

The other day Col. Gillit, of Black Fork, accompanied by his son, visited the Traveller office. "I've been laying off for some time," he said, "to fetch my boy in. I know that you want somebody to help you on this sheet, for it's man's natur to get tired. Now, my boy Tom here has had a heap of money spent on his eddycation, and I don't wink that it's right to waste him on law office. The furst indication he had that he was fitted fur newspaper work was when he writ somethin on the fence with a piece of charcoal an' got into s ight about it. What was it you writ,

"I writ that Ben Buckle was a liar, nswered the boy. "Now, don't you see what stuff there's intu? Just look, a boy only-how id are you, son?" "Twelve, goin' on thirteen.

Just look at a boy only twelve goin n thirteen writin' such a political article s that. The man who writ the paper independence couldn't do any better than that. And you ought to see non with a pen. Son, show the gentleman how you can freeze to the end of a pen and rear like a hoss." The boy took up a pen, pressed men the table and capered around. "That's what I call complishment, ontinued the father. "That's what call snap. Son, show the gentleman how you can throw your whole nature nto har.

The boy took the pen and wrote "liar with a bold smear Now, son, write "boss thief. The boy wrote "hoss thief," and ca pered around with a javenile grin of

That's what I call the result of eddy ation, resumed the father. "That's what I call newspaper ability. Now, sir, new much is he worth a month?" I would dislike to place a hurried esamate of value upon such active service as the young man could render," said the editor. "Besides, we could not utilize mu here, for this is not a political paper. Your son is a political writer, and I would advise you to see the proprietor of a dudy sheet.

"I reckon you are right. This is ater tame establishment. Come on, s. u. I must get you a place whar you can sling your jists." The young man will no doubt become an eminent campaign writer, and will
