THE CONQUEROR'S DANGER,

The steamer Conqueror had an uu reasant experience on the lake last night. She left Port Dalhousie about 10 clock last night for Kingston, running through a dust sea which would have made any other craft roll considerably When about 15 miles off Cobarg a snow storm set in, and the steamer was head et for the Larbour. The lamp at the end of the pier could not be seen and no wonder when it was afterwards warned to have been left unlit, the I . oper of it stating that he did not think there were any boats on the lake. ight in a house about a quarter of a mile below the harbour was taken for that on the pier and the error was only discovered when the lead was dropped and some one shouted from the shore. The steamer returned where the pier was supposed to be, and the whistle was blown until a hotel keeper appeared and piloted the way into a position of shelter One of the Conqueror's crew informs us that the wind blew a gale on the shore but had the craft been a sailing vesse she would assuredly have gone ashere

WRECK OF THE FOLGER.

The steam yacht Shoecraft, frozen in the ico since Sanday night with the bolies of the Captain and mate of the Folger on board, got clear of the ice vesterlay morning and proceeded on Ler way to Clayton. Another body came ashore ye sterday evening; it is that of a short, heavy set man, clean shaven, except a heavy sandy moustache, high forehead had on a rubber coat and black coat underneath, strap around the top of his cotlegs. In the pocket was a post of, fee money order for fifty dollars, pay able at Brockville, eighty-three cents in change, a knife, a razor, and some jewellery. Mr. W. J. McCaffrey, of Ogdensburg, is looking after the body of his brother, who was second mate on the Folger. An agent of the British American insurance Co. went to the wreck to look after the coal. The body must be that of Backus, an account of whom is given elsewhere.

LIFE SAVING STATIONS. Recommendations Made to the Minister

Marine and Fisheries Suggestions

of Capt, John Benselly Repeatedly the necessity of life saving stations has been pointed out, up to this time without result. We are encouraged to make one more effort to seeure protection for our vesselmen and their property, remembering that we have sue ceeded in other agitations and that there may be virtue in an oft-told tale. About two years ago, during the session of Parliament, Captain John Donnelly, then in the service of Messrs. Calvin & Breck, chanced to be in Ottawa, and he had escasion to discuss with the Hon. J. H. Pope, Minister of Marine and Fish eries, the loss of the prop. Zealand and schr. Simcoe. The veteran wrecker then took the opportunity to state the great he mest dangerous perhaps upon the chain of lakes. Captain J. Dennelly's piciens were considered of some value.

need there was of life saving stations along the Prince Edward County coast, al his recommendations were endorsed by Mr. J. McCuaig. It was represented that three stations, fully equipped, were absolutely required -one at South Bay, one at Salmon Point, and one at Presque Isle. Had these been erected, as it was expected they would be, a score of lives would have been saved; indeed at this moment the drowning of the Felger's crew would not be sadly lamented. THE AMBRICAN STATIONS. The American Government has been accused of parsimony in connection with service in which men exhibit heroism that is not surpassed upon the battlefield and yet they granted last year $500,000 for the maintenance of life stations, and have added to their numer and efficiency to such an extent that the expenditure next year minst be $75 : 000. On Lake Michigan alone some ten new stations are to be established and those on this lake and the river greatly improved. There are three not far fress Kingston, to the usefulness of which several vesselmen last evening ere testimony. These are at Oswege, Port Ontario and Sandy Creek, the whole within a distance of 30 miles. This season they have saved more Canadians han Americans, a circumstance which our Yankee cousins will not appreciate so highly when it has been so lately made apparent that there is not a reciprocity of favours on the part of this suntry. On the opening of navigation the Sandy Creek party took the crew off the schr. Nellie Theresa, abandoning the vessel, but after a channel had been dredged outside of her she was pulled off the beach by the Dominion Wrecking Company. On Thursday last the Oswego men came to the timely relief of the schr. Annie M. Foster, but on the same day the schr. Felger went to pieces in sight of land, the fishermon of Prince Edward viewing the catastrophe and proving unable to render the perishing crew assistance in the absence of

PROPER BOATS AND EQUIPPAGE. The American crews as a rule number five; they live in comfertable houses, are always watchful, and are very prompt in coming to the aid of vessels in distress When not otherwise engaged they are drilling, and have be come se expert in the use of the mortar that they can throw a line a great distance and with remarkable precision. Their boats are flat bottomed, and so constructed that they can be hauled safely and with great facility apon the shore, and ride the surf as the metallic beats will not. We may repeat that which was stated in the telegrams a day or two ago-that during the last year 237 vessels came to grief along the American coast, that they and their cargoes were valued at $4,758,000, and that they carried 2,278 human beings. Of those on the wrecked vessels 2,256 ere rescued, and property to the value of $3,000,000 saved from the waste o waters. During the ten years the life saving service has been in operation the anmber of persons saved is 14.298. the property saved $18,064,902.

LOSSES ON OUR SHORKS. "During the past 20 years," observed he Superintendent of the Dominion Wrecking and Salvage Company, know of 50 accidents having occurred on the Prince Edward shore. At no time is safe to sail within two miles of Salmon Point, and in a blow it is queafe to get within three miles of it. A large bay runs from South Bay to Presqu' Isle, and a vessel driven into it by a THE HOLIDAY SEASON is approaching and we have beautiful Goods. Tome and tho see South wind invariably meets distater. The fishermen on the shores of Prince Edwa | are deserving of recognition for the noble part they have played when wrecks occurred. The schrs. St. George. Tornade, Cook, Heather Ball, Garibald Zealand, Simcoe, Coleman, Acorn, Lord Elgin, George Thurston, Wheeler, White Eagle, Enterprise. Albatross, T. C. Street, Jessie, Belle Sheridan, Norway and a score of other craft were wrecked and the bones of many of them line what may be termed the 'Anticosti of Lake Ontario. The crews of many of them were engulfed in the angry sea." Captain, who stood by, said he was one of the crew of the St. George (which belonged to M. C. Cameron, which went ashore off Point Traverse and was afterwards sold Captain Gaskin), and he said he was rescued in a fish boat by John Y. Palmatier and kept by him for over three weeks. He as well as Capt. Donuelly remember many rescues, particularly that of a crew who, in dispair, lay down upon the deck to die. The icy water washed over them, and when the rescuing party reached them their hair had to be chopped away as it lay frozen and bound the exhausted creatures to the deck.

THE PAST VIVIOLY RECALLED. "Strange lights are still seen," oberves the Hamilton Spectator, "recently, along the shore at Weller's Beach, where the schooner Belle Sheridan was wrecked, and all hands lost save a boy. Not far from there died Louis Stonehouse, mate of the schooner Garabaldi When the Garabaldi was wrecked some of the crew of the schooner were taken off, and others remained on board till night came. The rickety old substitute for a life boat could not make another trip. All but the mate climbed into the rigging and lashed themselves to the frozen shrouds. The mate went below. The terrors of that night can never be expressed in words. The decks were deep with ice, and the rigging was like ron bars. Every sea that dashed over the schooner piled the ice higher, and the vessel was slowly breaking up. When the resouing party came with the daylight Louis Stonehouse was dead. He stood in the cabin frozen in the midst of a block of ice. With his hands above his head, as if to ward off this terrible and certain death, he was a menument to the niggardliness that al lowed him to freeze and die for want of a life-boat. Willing hearts and strong arms were on the beach, but boat there was none. So died Louis Stonehouse, the mate of the Garabaldi, and his ghost still walks the beach."

NOT PROPERLY LIGHTED.

Mariners have another complaint to make-that there is insufficient light on Salmen Point. The little red light is visible 7 miles distant on a bright night. but totally invisible during a storm. Thore is neither signal gon nor bell, and the vessels in the blackness rush upon the sheals and are lost. A signal gas should be piacen on Salmon Peins and fired every hour during the stormy wear ther. A better light should be provided Even the wreckers dread doing any work along the Prince Edward coast, as there are no harbors where safety can be had in the event of a blow. ONE BOAT OF NO USB.

Captain Deanelly thirks three stations should be erected, such to be manned by Captain and two men. When a large orce is required it can be got among the Ashermen. ANOTHER CAPTAIN'S OPINION. Capt. Eccles, in an interview with representative of the Intelligencer, also recalls some of the assidents on the Bay of Quinte coast. The schooner Bay of Quinte, laden with wheat, was wrecked
