The Church et Rome has made confession a food essential to the soul's life and growth. Again, if we want to teach the doorine of the real spiritual presence of Christ in the Sacrament, as taught in the B.ble and held by the Church Catholic our people imagine we are teaching them the Romish dectrine of transso betantiation, a thing unknown in the Church for centuries and never held as an essential doctrine to the sacrament. If we teach our people the scriptural and Catholic doctrine of prayers for the dead, as held by the Church in all ages, it is confounded immediately with the Romish doctrine of requiem masses, a thing totally different from it. The Bible and the Church teach us to remember the dead in loving affection, to pray that the rest of Paradise may be exchanged for the glory of Heaven, and that we with all those that

How different this Catholic sense of prayer for the dead is from the Reman sense any one will see who will glance at the principally of the students attending prayer for the church militant and the burial service in the English prayer book and then at the Romish Missal. Then again the intermediate state or paradise has been held as a Catholic truth in all ages, viz., a place where the souls of the righteous rest in peace until the resurrection day. This blessed doctrine Rome has transfermed into her doctrine of Purgatery, a place of penal fire, where the souls, not of the wicked se ers only $1 each. much as the righteous, are supposed to be purified for the Judgment Day.
