The Best Field FOR EMIGRANTS.

An immense area of Railroad and Government Lands, of great fertility, within easy reach of permanent market, at extremely low prices, is now offered for sale in Eastern Oregon and Eastern Washington Territory.

These lands form part of the GRAIN BELT of the Pacific Slope, and are within an average distance of 200 to 400 miles from Portland, where steamships and sailing vessels are frequently loaded FOR ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Grain at Portland, Oregon, commands a price equal to that obtained in Chicago. The early completion of the Northern Pacific R. R. is now assured, and guarantees to settlers cheap and quick transportation and good markets both East and West. The opening of this new overland line to the Pacific, together with the construction of the network of 30 miles of railroad by the O. R. & N. Co. in the valleys of the great Columbia and its principal tributaries, will cause a rapid increase in the value of lands now open to purchase and pre-emption. There is every indication of an enormous movement of population to the Columbia River region in the immediate future.

Lands show an average yield of 40 Bushels of Wheat per acre. No Failure of crops ever known.

Railroad Lands offered at the uniform rate of $2.50 an Acre.

ASLEEP.

In summer time how fair it showed
My garden by the village road,
Where May sinks of brown gleamed,
And roses softly blushed
With azure spires and parian white
Pale honeysuckle, the sun's delight,
And lilies that perfumed the night
Where o'er the south wind rushed.

There solemn purple pansies stood,
And tulips red with floral blood,
And cold things fresh from frost and wood
Alive with dainty grace.
Deep heaven-blue bells of columbine,
The darkly mystic passion vine,
And clematis, that loves to twine,
Beloved that happy place.

Beneath the strong unclouded blaze
Of long and fervent summer days
Their odors smote the passing gaze,
And dazzled every eye.
Their cups of scented honey-dew
Charmed all the bees that o'er them flew
And butterflies of radiant hue
Paused as they floated by.

Now falls a cloud of sailing snow,
The bitter winds of winter blow,
No blossom dares its cup to show—
Earth folds them in her breast.
A shroud of white, a virgin pall,
Is slowly, softly, hiding all,
In vain shall any sweet wind call,
To break their silent rest.

My garden is a vanished dream,
Dead in the waning moon's cold beam,
Clear icicles above it gleam
And yet—I know not how—
My flowers will hear the dropping rain
When spring rewreath his hill and plain,
And then it shall be mine again
It is God's garden now.

—Rose Terry Cooke, for Feb.

LED BY A DETECTIVE.

An English Apostle of Temperance in Search of Bald Face.

Mr. Robert Graham, Secretary of the Church of England Temperance Society, is now in New York, and has been taking a trip about the city, accompanied by a detective. The New York Sun says they went first to The Allen's "Mabile." The room was half filled with young men, who sat at tables drinking and smoking. The two companions seated themselves at an unoccupied table, and Mr. Graham asked the detective what he would take. The detective said he would have a cigar, and Mr. Graham also took one. The waiter lighted two matches, and when they were blazing, free of sulphur, he presented one to each of the two customers. Mr. Graham puffed his cigar like a frequenter of the place, while he composedly looked about the room. Soon he arose, and the detective conducted him down stairs. Here young women, clad in high-necked dresses and long skirts, served the drinks ordered by the patrons.

"See that," he said, pointing to an inscription painted on the wall to the effect that no profane or indecent language would be permitted. Then he turned and read another inscription, which informed strangers that partners for dancing could be obtained on application to the floor manager.

Mr. Graham was next conducted to Harry Hill's resort. Mr. Graham and his friend sat with their hats on like the other patrons of the place, and looked at a young woman dressed in short skirts dancing on the stage. He observed a young man with a weak looking face, whose hat sat on the back of his head, and remarked that such as he appeared to be were the natural prey of vice. The detective introduced Mr. Graham to Harry Hill, who, noticing that he was an Englishman, fell to talking about his own birthplace in England.

"What are lady cashiers?" asked Mr. Graham, as he read the words on a glittering gas-lamp in front.

It was explained to him that they were young women who received the money for the drinks which they served to customers. On entering he seated himself at a side table, and a lady cashier in a high-necked dress, with long skirts, took a seat opposite. He talked pleasantly with her and ordered cigars for himself and friend. She wore a blue ribbon in her hair. Soon another young woman clad decently like the first seated herself at his side. She wore a red ribbon. The two drew him into conversation, which on his part was carried on in a pleasant but offhanded way, which did not distinguish him from the other patrons of the place.

He was interested to learn that the young women receive when they go on duty in the evening a certain sum in checks, which are good for drinks at the bar, and that they are held to account for all the checks they have not passed in at the close of the evening, getting, however, percentage on their sales.

From the Opera Garden the party went to the Atlantic Garden. Here Mr. Graham suggested that the detective might refish a drink of beer and begged him to drink, if it was agreeable to him. Mr. Lefferts reluctantly consented, on the ground that it would serve to make the party less conspicuous, and give Mr. Graham a better chance to look about him unobserved. When the beer was brought Mr. Lefferts hastily put it out of sight. The Englishman was told that several large fortunes had been made out of lager beer in this place, and when he was informed that on Sunday Germans, men, women and children, in family groups, could be seen drinking beer around the table, he smiled at the picture drawn, and did not say anything in condemnation of the practice.

Mr. Graham's object in visiting America is to study the restraining effects of law on drinking, and to examine American inebriate asylums. He was sent here by his society.

From Elder H. L. Gilman, a Minister of the Gospel in Glover, Vt.

"I have been troubled for several years with a difficulty of the heart and lungs, have applied to several physicians for help, and have tried almost every remedy recommended, without receiving any assistance, but had been growing weaker and weaker, until, hearing of WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD WILD CHERRY about a year since, I commenced using it with immediate relief. It has not only restored my lungs to a sound state—but I am entirely relieved of disease of the heart. I have no hesitation in saying that it is the best lung medicine before the public; and I cheerfully and conscientiously recommend it to all persons suffering with pulmonary complaints."

BURNED IN THEIR HUT.

The Fate that Overwhelmed Eight Carpetbe Gatherers in Virginia.

A party of ten men working in the pentine coastlined in the woods at Jackson springs, Moore county, built an incline shed between two large pines, and as they expected to be at work in this spot for some weeks they made the structure as substantial as possible, piling upon the roof layers of earth and hickory poles, and weighing it with the largest stones they could find. Last night a severe storm prevailed, and they built a large fire in the centre of the structure. After eating their rations they spread their blankets upon the ground, and about 11 o'clock were sleeping huddled together around the fire, which they had replenished with fresh logs before they went to sleep. It is supposed that about an hour after midnight, when the storm was at its height, the roof, with its mass of stones and earth, fell in on the sleeping men. The floor was covered with beds of leaves and straw, and the sides were made of dry twigs interlaced, and there was a barrel of turpentine in the place. These caught fire, and the whole mass was soon burning at white heat. The two survivors, James Jarret and William Vix, were sleeping near the door, and were both

CRUSHED BY THE FALLING MASS.

Vix was the first to extricate himself, although a large log was across his stomach. He managed to drag himself ten feet from the ruins, and then lost consciousness. When he revived he saw streaks of flame shooting up from the pile, and heard the voice of Jarrett crying, "Help me, for God's sake, I am roasting." One of Vix's legs was broken, and he had to crawl back to the ruins. He succeeded in getting Jarrett out, but that was all he could do. Jarrett was more seriously hurt than himself, one foot being burned off and his left shoulder dislocated. The two survivors were too helpless to venture near the place again. They heard agonizing shrieks from two of their companions imprisoned in the burning heap of turpentine, straw, leaves and wood, but could render them no assistance. Half an hour after the fire had done its work. Vix and Jarrett suffered intensely from the cold before they were found and brought to Carthage this morning. The blackened skeletons of six of their companions were found in one place, and in another spot two half roasted bodies of William Evlett and Alexander Cell were found pinned to the earth by sharpened slats of pine, which had gone through their bodies. The names of the other six were Robert Sampson, Donald Evlett, Hurton Mortimer, Albert Rhodes, David Meggs and Frank Ribbiss. Jarrett cannot possibly recover.

DRUMMED TO DEATH.

Singular Slaughter of Rats Out in Newcastle—A Reporter's Deadly Pencil.

(Newcastle (Pa.) News.)

A most remarkable phenomenon was witnessed in the Second Ward, in this city, on Friday afternoon of last week, being no less than large numbers of rats being enticed to their death by the roll of drums. A number of the small boys of this city, hearing it said that rats could be brought out of their holes by the beating of drums, determined to try the experiment. So procuring a number of these instruments of martial music, and half a dozen dogs with a weakness for rat flesh, they proceeded to a barn near Pearson's flouring mill, in which structure were known to dwell many well fed rodents, who subsisted on the contents of the grain bins near by. Stationing part of their number with drums in the hay mow of the stable, and the others at the doors with the dogs, everybody was eager for the fray. The drummers brought their sticks down on the taut calf skin, and soon the building shook to its very foundation with the deafening roll. Several boys had been stationed at various knot-holes in the floor of the hay mow, and these youths peering down into the semi-darkness below, soon saw little twinkling eyes appear at certain apertures all around the apartment beneath. The drumming was continued and sharp pointed noses and then sleek bodies of rats came from the holes. Soon the rapid rolling of the drums seemed to excite the rodents to a point beyond self-control. They began to caper and whisk about the stable floor as if intoxicated. They ran around the feed bins in a wild chase after each other. So rapidly did they turn corners that their tails snapped with a report like that of a bull whacker's whip, and making the flour fly from their quadal appendages so as to fill the apartment with dust. Now was the time for action. The boys with the dogs were signaled, the doors were opened, and the hungry canines let in on them. The unfortunate rats seemed to be under a spell, and made no attempt to seek their holes. For five minutes slaughter reigned supreme, and when it had subsided the floor was covered with the bodies of forty three rats. Again were the drums called into requisition and the same scene ensued again. This time thirty eight rats bit the dust. The boys continued their operations with their drums and dogs all the afternoon, and when evening came there were piled up in front of the stable, mangled, cut and torn, the bodies of 479 rats, in fact all the rodents which had lived and thrived for years on the grain in the mill had been totally exterminated.

High Marriages.

The Baroness Burdett Coutt's honey moon with her young lover is being made cloudy and uncomfortable by the comments of some of the English society journals. There is so much snobbery in England that it is never safe for a man to blow his nose until he first sees how Lord Tomfoddy or Baron Bowlegs blows his. Anybody would think that this was the first wedding that ever took place in which one of the parties had mercenary motives, even assuming that it was the money that young Bartlett was after. When Lord Rosebery married Hannah Rothschild, the greatest heiress in England, the papers did not all tear their hair in despair, and say that he should be gibbeted. On the contrary, they all congratulated him, and said what a fine match he made. But then young Rosebery was a real lord, and young Bartlett is only an ordinary person. But granting that all that is said of young Bartlett were true, and that he played his cards for the baroness' fortune, the British aristocracy is hardly in a position to turn up its nose, and preach long sermons on the impropriety of such marriages. Probably a large per cent. of the old wrecks who are most severe on the baroness have sold their daughters to the highest bidder, without regard to his age, and without any questions as to his character. Why the marriage for money of a young man to an eminent virtuous old lady should be a more heinous offence than the sale of a young and innocent girl to a broken down roue, is one of those questions that are not easily answered.—Telegram.

Zopess and Brazil.

As a result of the new commercial enterprise just assuming importance with Brazil is the introduction of Zopess, so justly celebrated where it is known for the cure of all forms of Indigestion.
