"Quiéta non Movere."

If, as the Toronto World says, the truth in tariff matters may most likely be found to lie between the extreme poles of Protection and Free Trade, that "golden mean" must surely be found in a revenue tariff with its incidental protection; and this is precisely the policy advocated by the leaders of the Reform party, and the fiscal plank on which they will take their stand at the next election.

The assassination of the Czar of Russia has sounded an alarm among the Royal households of Europe, and a kind of general and Imperial panic has been the result. It cannot be said that it is without reason either, for the Nihilists of Russia have their counterparts in the Communists of France and the Socialists of Germany and elsewhere. The despatches recently informed us that General Melikoff, while taking every precaution to secure the protection of our own Prince of Wales, and his brother, Prince Alfred, son-in-law to the murdered monarch, candidly admitted that he could not guarantee their absolute safety while at St. Petersburg. The Crown Prince of Germany has been threatened with assassination, and even the Pope has not been allowed exemption from the menaces of the murderous miscreants. All these things indicate a very disturbed and demoralized condition of the body politic in Europe, and must furnish a theme for very serious anxiety to the statesmen who are in charge of the destinies of the nations of the old world.

REPUDIATION.

When repudiation begins there is no telling where it will stop. This has been illustrated in the action of Senator Mahone, who recently sold his party in the United States Senate, and transferred by means of his vote the control of that body to the Republicans. Senator Mahone, it appears, owes his position as Senator to the fact that he was the candidate of readjustment of the state debts of Virginia. Readjustment of state debts is explained to mean compelling the creditors to accept part payment. In his person, then, was represented a movement of financial repudiation, and when he got to Congress he simply presented another phase of his repudiation character by repudiating the party that had elected him and going over to the other side. Under ordinary circumstances this might not have been so bad, but the circumstance of the nearly even division of the Senate, between the two parties, gave him an adventitious importance which he has utilized to the detriment of the party which elected him. This will be a lesson to the Democrats to steer clear of repudiationists for the future. They elected him to repudiate the State debt, and he has elected to repudiate the men who elected him. In political as in all other matters honesty is the best policy.

CARLETON.

The Carleton, N. B., election takes place to-day. We do not in this county anticipate the success of the Liberal candidate inasmuch as the constituency has been continuously held by the Tory Connell family for years. Dr. Connell, brother of the deceased member, is now seeking to succeed him, and so strongly was it taken for granted that the representation of the county must necessarily remain in this family that for some time no one ventured to challenge the contest. Late in the day, however, Mr. Irvine, ex-M.P.P., announced himself as a candidate so as to prevent the election going by default, and so as to give the men who disapprove of the great swindles called the national policy and the Pacific Railway syndicate a chance to record their protest against these twin iniquities. At the last election the late Mr. Connell was returned by the large majority of over three hundred votes so that it is only reasonable to expect the return of his brother as the result of to-day's polling. The reduction or the increase of the Conservative majority will likely be the only indication the election will afford as to how the Government stands in the county, and how it is likely to fare in the seaboard provinces at the next general election.

CIVIL SERVICE PRIZES.

The comfortable and covetable positions of Customs Collectorships at Toronto and Montreal are awaiting the appointment of some political retainer and supporter of the present Dominion Government. In the former city Mr. Patton, an ex-law partner of Sir John Macdonald, is expected to receive the reward, while below Mr. M. P. Ryan, M. P. for Montreal Centre, is doing his level best to secure the position for himself. There is considerable doubt about the latter's success; doubt which the hon. gentleman shares himself, for despairing of the Collectorship he tried hard at the same time for the Wardenship of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary. Here again, however, he has been borked by the rival claim of some French Canadian applicant, whose cause has been warmly espoused by members of that clannish nationality. As to the Toronto Collectorship we cannot but condemn the appointment of Mr. Patton as being for many reasons an unfortunate one. He is a lawyer and a worn out one at that, being older now than Mr. Leslie, who was two years ago superannuated from the Toronto Postmastership to make way for Mr. Patteson, of the Mail newspaper. In fact Mr. Patton's appointment would be proof positive of the hypocrisy of the Government in issuing a Civil Service Commission, for it would be in direct violation of the report which that Commission has made to Parliament in regard to appointments and promotions in the Civil Service.

TORONTO LETTER.

Some of the Interesting Topics now Occupying Public Attention.

The Council of the Agricultural and Art Association met in this city last Thursday when Mr. J. B. Aylsworth was elected President. About 22 members were present. Routine business and the revision of the prize list occupied the greater portion of their time. The Association, notwithstanding the danger which threatens its very existence, still keeps to the beaten track and lacks either the desire or the capacity to display that enterprise which is imperatively demanded of it in order that it may hold its own with the Toronto Industrial Exhibition. The management of the latter is marked by that business ability which distinguishes the former by its absence. One new member of the Council, who was inclined to propose some departures from the system pursued in former years was met by the crushing rejoinder, "You think that you are going to work some improvement in the management of this Association, but we have found the old system, take it all in all, to be the best." Such, if not the words, is the spirit animating the majority of the Council. Knowing that they are fast losing their former prestige they have appointed a committee with instructions to try and devise some plans whereby they could be enabled to fill the place it was intended they should. Such action would be praiseworthy were it not for the fact that they are compelled to it by the exigency of their situation and is not therefore of their own volition. This committee is to report at the next meeting of the Council on the 22nd of April. The Secretary of the Association, Mr. R. J. Craig, has resigned.

THE JUNIOR BARRISTERS.

The legal controversy respecting the claims of the junior bar to a small representation on the bench of the law society goes on apace. Have not the members of the junior bar sufficient ability, wisdom and dignity to furnish three or four benchers. Have the younger men no right to make their views felt in the body by which they are governed on questions in which they are infinitely more interested than the older men? Are they to suffer from want of that legislation which the benchers should initiate, but neglect to do. In a word are they to have their material interests sacrificed and disregarded merely for the privilege of voting for men of great eminence in the profession and gratifying an admiration for the antique? Such are the questions agitating the junior bar and shaking the very foundations of Osgoode Hall. The junior barristers feel dissatisfied on the one hand with the action of the law society regarding the hour for closing the library, the abolition of the law school, and various other matters, and on the other hand with the inaction of the law society in allowing their funds to lie idle in the bank, and in allowing the law, permitting laymen to practice in the Division Court and the country conveyancer to ply his trade, to remain as it is on the statute book. These are things it is contended which hurt the young practicioner, and not the old one who has become "eminent" in the profession. The election of three benchers takes place shortly, and it may be safely predicted that no junior barrister, who is designated as one called to the bar since 1870, will be elected notwithstanding the present agitation.

STREET RAILWAY WAR.

The word railway seems to have become a synonym for war. The Metropolitan Street Railway Company, which was mentioned in the WHIG's Toronto correspondence early in the year, asked permission from the Council to lay a network of railways through the city, specifying the exact routes. The only street railway company in the city had hitherto refused to extend their line to accommodate the pressing needs of the citizens so that the Council were almost unanimous in consenting to consider an agreement with the new company. The details of this important agreement were being considered by civic committees, when it was suddenly learned that the old company had commenced to tear up Church street with a view of laying a track its entire length, claiming the right to do so under their agreement with the city. As Church street was one of the main connecting links in the proposed system, this was evidently a move to head off the Metropolitan. As the old company had not given the required ten days notice of such action, and had not submitted the rail to be used for the approval of the Council as required, the Mayor felt justified in notifying the company to suspend operations, a decision subsequently endorsed by a resolution of the Council. The company persisted in the work, and, moreover, worked night and day in order to get as much done as possible before the Metropolitan agreement could be sanctioned by the Council, when the latter company would have the authority to lay their track on Church street from end to end. An injunction from the Court of Chancery was at once applied for by the city, and after two enlargements is set down for hearing to-day (Monday.) In the meantime an interlocutory injunction was granted, since when the agreement with the Metropolitan has been ratified by the City Council.

NEW TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION.

An association is being formed here, consisting of all advocates of temperance whether total abstainers or non-abstainers. It aims at securing the observance of present laws, at the establishment of coffee taverns, and at forming a common platform where all those willing to advance the best interests of temperance reform may work together. The Rev. D. J. Macdonnell is the prime mover in the new scheme.

SPECTATOR.

Toronto, March 28.

Diocese of Ontario.

A new church is shortly to be erected at Carleton Place, on the site of the present church, at a cost of about $7,000. It is to be a handsome gothic building of stone. Through the generosity of Mr. A. L. Roberts, one of the church wardens of Trinity Church, Shannonville, the entire debt on that church ($400) is now paid off, and the building is ready for consecration. The Rev. T. Stanton, formerly Church of England minister to the Mohawk mission, has been appointed to the mission of Milford and Marysburg. A new organ is being built for Christ Church, Belleville, by Mr. J. H. Phillips, of Napanee. St. Andrew Church, Wellington, has been closed during the past winter, owing, it is said, to dissensions between the congregation and its minister.

OVATION TO BLAKE.

Liberal Leader in Montreal — Two Good Speeches.

Montreal, March 29.—The Young Mens' Reform Club entertained Hon. Edward Blake to a banquet in the Windsor Hotel this evening. Mr. J. J. McLaren, Advocate, the President of the Club, occupied the chair, and was supported on his right by the distinguished guest of the evening, whose entrance into the room was a signal for enthusiastic cheers from the assembly.

Seated at the principal table were Hon. Messrs. Laflamme, Huntington, Laurier, Joly, Mercier and Marchand. The attendance was large, the dining room of the Hall being well filled.

The menu fully sustained the high reputation which the hotel has already obtained.

The usual loyal toasts of "The Queen," "Prince and Princess of Wales," and "Governor General," were given and received with great enthusiasm, the audience singing the National Anthem after the first on the list. "The Army, Navy and Volunteers" followed, for which Hon. Mr. Marchand replied in fitting terms. The President then proposed, in eulogistic language,

"THE HEALTH OF MR. BLAKE."

He spoke of the enthusiasm which that gentleman's former as well as present visit had evoked in this city, and the good that had resulted from the sage advice he had given when here in January last, "to organize," and their organization, which at the time only numbered fifty now exceeded three hundred and fifty. He referred to the eminent services of the leader of the Liberal party and his little band during the past session in the House of Commons, and concluded by expressing the pleasure which he felt in seeing such a magnificent attendance present to do honor to their guest, establishing the fact that Mr. Blake had the magnetism required in the leader of a political party to draw his followers to him.

LIBERAL LEADER'S SPEECH.

Hon. Edward Blake, on rising to respond, met with an ovation from his admirers such as any statesman might be proud of. It was some minutes before he could proceed, the cheers being continued again and again. He commenced his speech by expressing his grateful and hearty thanks for the reception which they had given him. He was conscious, he said, that it was not to the individual but to the Liberal principles which he represented that he owed their overwhelming kindness. Their kindness and warmth to-night were tokens of sympathy also with his colleagues, the little but united band that had stood together and debated the great question of the past session. Such a demonstration, he thought, augured well for the Liberal cause in Canada. He then referred to the meeting in the former part of the day of delegates and the good results likely to flow from it. He next referred at considerable length to the Pacific Railway question, traversing the same ground exactly as he had done at the meeting of delegates in the afternoon. He designated the consummation of the contract with the syndicate not only as a great misfortune to the country but as a great crime. He described, in detail, the efforts made by the Opposition to prevent the carrying out of the scheme and mentioned several alternatives which might have been adopted instead to the manifest advantage of the country. The Government, however, he remarked, were under some pressure which he did not understand and refused to listen to what, he said, was the out of doors. He next criticised the tariff, which he denounced in unmeasured terms, and urged that the time will come when it must be modified in the interests of all parties. He dwelt upon the great increase in the expenditure, and referred to the declaration of the present Finance Minister in 1878, that the expenditure should not exceed $4,000,000 in excess of that. He had no doubt, he said, that between the present time and the next general election the people would consider carefully all these issues and give a large Liberal majority at the polls.

OVERWHELMING VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

OTHER TOASTS AND SPEECHES.

The following toasts ensued:

"The Senate and House of Commons,"

"The Provincial Legislature,"

"Our Mercantile and Manufacturing Interests, &c."

Among the subsequent speakers were Hon. Messrs. Huntington, Laurier, Joly and others. The proceedings did not end until an early hour this morning. A military band was present and discoursed a choice musical programme in the course of the evening. Everything went off most pleasantly.

AFTERNOON MEETING.

At the afternoon meeting, for organization purposes, Hon. Mr. Blake was introduced, the great audience rising and receiving him with cheers. He referred to the work of the Liberal party not as a narrow one, but one based on the broad principles of right, liberty, and the freedom of what we regard as our sacred rights. Holding to ourselves the fullest rights for ourselves—we must offer to others liberty of opinion, liberty of the person, and liberty of the party. It is on this that the platform of the National Liberal party is based. He sometimes heard those descended from the old French stock calling themselves Canadien. He could not allow them to confine to themselves the name; We are all Canadians. Mr. Blake repeated the above remarks in French, and was greeted with the loudest applause. To another plank laid down by Mr. Mercier he wished to express his adherence, the actual, practical self-government of the people by the people in the leaving to local governments the full control of their local affairs. It behooves each of us to make a wise and liberal use of the power given to each. In referring to the Legislative Council he said he thought that the existence of a co-ordinate body, elected by the Governor-in-Council for life, and responsible to no one for its actions, was against the spirit of responsible government. It never had existed in Ontario, had been abolished in Manitoba, and if he was correctly informed, had been declared against by the people of the Maritime Provinces, and it remained to Quebec to follow their example.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

New York, March 30.—The New York [illegible] it is generally believed that the Senate is on the eve of a large [illegible] and that [illegible] Conkling will [illegible] for a free ballot and honest count. His friends expect that the response that will come up from the Stalwart Republicans all over the country will not be pleasing to the President or Blaine.

The Times says James is the happiest man in the Cabinet, finding plenty of work and despatching it readily. He put a stop to the [illegible] as soon as he entered the department by ordering that no increase of service or compensation shall take place on any mail routes without his sanction.

The Herald says the Opposition to Chandler's confirmation has gathered strength within the last few days, and includes nearly all the Democrats and enough of Republicans to make his case hopeless, unless some new complications arise to save him.

Garfield's friends, with whom he has freely conversed, say there was no agreement between him and Conkling or Platt that he would not make nominations in New York without consulting them; that concerning certain nominations, pleasing to the Stalwart wing he had intended to talk to Platt, and would have waited before sending them to the Senate for Platt's return from New York had not Conkling told him, on Sunday night, that as he and Platt were entirely agreed about the names it was not necessary to delay the nominations. It is asserted further that in this conversation Conkling was told that the President intended soon to make certain nominations for the anti-Conkling wing. The manner in which this information was received did not encourage confidences in that direction, even had the President intended them, but having consulted Conkling as to nominations he intended to be pleasing to his wing it was not thought necessary that he should also be consulted as to those which were intended to please the other wing. Robertson's nomination was determined upon before the Cabinet was formed, and was known to Platt before he became Senator, Platt pledging it his support.

Washington, D.C., March 30.—Notice is given that the Treasury will redeem on April 1st the five per cents, embraced in recent call which mature May 21st, $125 in full payment for each $100 of bond.

TRANSVAAL.

Roberts' Return — Military Locations — Civil War Pending.

Newcastle, Natal, March 29.—A Boer is imprisoned at Heidelberg, charged with the murder of Captain Elliott, who was killed while crossing the Vaal River in January after having been released from imprisonment at Heidelberg. The report of the surrender of Potchefstroom is confirmed. The provisions sent under the conditions of the armistice reached there twenty-four hours after the surrender.

London, March 29.—The garrison of Potschefstroom finally surrendered because of the failure of provisions. The total loss to the troops is eighteen killed and nineteen wounded during the entire siege.

Durban, March 29.—General Roberts will start homewards from the Cape on the 7th of April.

Three regiments of cavalry, three of infantry, three companies of engineers, three companies of the army service corps and three batteries of artillery will be stationed north of Newcastle.

Newcastle, Natal, March 30.—A meeting of English and Dutch refugees from the Transvaal has petitioned the Queen, stating that, confiding in the public declarations that the annexation of the Transvaal was irreversible, they invested capital there. Their property is now worthless. A resolution was carried summoning the English and Dutch residents of the Transvaal not to surrender the towns to the Boers, and promising support in the event of civil war.

Dublin, March 30.—The Land League subscriptions last week amounted to £2,399; all but £100 were from America.

Cases of Smuggling.

Ottawa, March 30.—The Government organ here says: "We are informed that the Customs Department recently confiscated a quantity of goods imported by a Toronto firm, who were charged with undervaluating and making out false entries. In addition to the confiscation the parties were compelled to pay the full amount of duty and a heavy fine in addition. A similar offence has been discovered in London, Ont., and the case is now under consideration. From what we learn the confiscation of a large quantity of English and American importations will be the result. We understand that the Department is enforcing the clause of the law which imposes a fine of three times the value of the goods seized. This, with the cost of a suit in the Exchequer Court, before which such cases go, should have a detrimental effect upon merchants of smuggling proclivities."

Another Storm.

New York, March 30.—A storm of great magnitude is in progress to-day. Snow and rain fell, the wind blew at the rate of 30 miles an hour. There is great damage done to shipping in the bay. Telegraph communication has been interrupted.
