Day's Extract of Malt.

THE following is a certificate in reference to the excellence of Day's Extract of Malt:

Kingston, March 22nd, 1881.

To B. W. DAY, M.D., Kingston.

Dear Sir,—It affords me much satisfaction in further testifying to the curative properties of your Extract of Malt. Before using it, my wife was reduced to a shadow, but now I am happy to say, that she wears a new creation, having gained of over ten pounds avoirdupois in the last month. I have, therefore, no hesitation in pronouncing your Extract a most excellent tonic and renovator of the system. I am confident that it only requires to be known to bring it into general use.

Yours truly, HENRY CONLEY.

In Chancery,--Re Tomkins.

AUCTION SALE OF VALUABLE CITY PROPERTY.

PURSUANT to an order for sale made in this matter, bearing date the Second day of March, 1881, there will be sold with the approbation of James Alexander Henderson, Esquire, Master of this Court at Kingston by James H. Metcalfe, Auctioneer, at his Auction Rooms in the Market Square, in the City of Kingston, at the hour of twelve o'clock noon, on TUESDAY, the 26th day of April, 1881, those premises situate on the corner of Barrie and Earl Streets in the City of Kingston, known as the Tomkins property, consisting of a rough cast house on Barrie Street and a brick tenement on Earl Street.

The premises on Barrie Street have until recently been occupied by Robert Tomkins as a Butcher's Shop and by Mrs. Tomkins as a residence. The brick building on Earl Street is let in four tenements. The property is one which can readily be leased and commands a high rental.

The property will be put up for sale in one parcel subject to a reserved bid.

One tenth of the purchase money must be paid down at the time of sale to the Vendor's Solicitors, and the remainder in one month from the day of sale without interest. Immediate possession can be given of the premises on Barrie Street, and the purchaser will be entitled at once to the rents of the Earl Street property.

In all other respects the conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the Court of Chancery.

Further particulars can be had from Messrs. Walkem and Walkem and Messrs. Britton & Whiting, of the City of Kingston, Solicitors.

Dated at Kingston, this 1st day of April, A.D. 1881.

Warner's Blood Purifier

THE season is at hand when most people require to take such medicine as will CLEANSE THE LIVER AND STOMACH of the impurities which are not generally discharged by nature alone, but which must be removed in order that those organs may perform their functions thoroughly. The most successful agent in such work are often the simplest, and in

are combined the three qualities of Simplicity, Safety and Success.

A course of this valuable medicine just at this time of the year has the desirable and certain effect of gradually but thoroughly purging and afterwards regulating the stomach, liver and bowels, and of cleansing the blood, and in this lies THE GRAND SECRET OF THE ENJOYMENT OF HEALTH. Warner's Blood Purifier sold by all druggists. Price fifty cents a bottle.

Almost a Calamity!

On the Grand Trunk Railway the other day a traveller taken with spasms caused much alarm among his fellow passengers; he appeared to be dying. A commercial traveller present, by chance, had a bottle of Star Relief, a dose of which he gave to the sufferer, who rapidly recovered; without this opportune dose he would doubtless have expired. Travellers should always carry a bottle of this medicine, the action of which is instantaneous. Star Relief acts like magic in any case of Neuralgia, Toothache, Earache, Cramps, Diarrhœa, Cholera, or Nervousness. Price 25cts per bottle. For sale at Wade's Drug Store, corner of King and Bagot Streets.

TENNYSON'S VISION.

For I dipt into the future, far as Human eye could see,
Saw the vision of the world, and all The wonder that would be.

Saw the heavens fill with commerce, Argosies of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, Dropping down with costly bales.

Heard the heavens fill with Shouting, and there rang a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling In the central blue.

Far along the world-wide whisper of The south-wind rushing warm,
With the standards of the people plunging Through the thunder storm.

Till the war-drum throbbed no longer, And the battle flags were furled
In the Parliament of man, the Federation Of the world.

There the common sense of most shall Hold a fretful realm in awe,
And the kindly earth shall Slumber, lapt in universal law.

THE CZAR'S PALACE.

Precautions That Were Taken to Preserve the Great Monarch's Life.

The Winter Palace is a huge oblong building, five stories high, and painted in a staring red brick color. On one side it borders a quay of the Neva, on the other it fronts the enormous square which is adorned with a monolith granite column erected to the memory of Alexander I. To the right of the palace stands the Admiralty, and a little further on the same side the Barracks of the Chevaliers Gardes; to the left are the Museum of the Hermitage and the Imperial printing office. Facing the Admiralty runs the Newski Prospect, which is the principal thoroughfare in St. Petersburg, so that the Czar could see from his palace windows all the animation of the city. The Winter Palace is said to have cost hundreds of lives in the erecting, for when the old one, which stood on the same site, had been burned down, Nicholas ordered that the new one should be built within six months. This necessitated the employment of thousands of workmen day and night through the winter, and many of these unfortunates were frozen. As fast as the lower stories were completed the walls were dried with roaring fires while the works were carried on above, and the upholsterers and decorators completed the furnishing of the principal rooms before the attics were roofed. Within ten days after the workmen had left the building it was inhabited and Nicholas first care on arriving was to go the round of the whole place with the architect and contractors to see that none of the work had been "scamped." Being satisfied with what he saw he paid the bill—about a million sterling—without a murmur. It was in this palace, so strangely erected, that the late Emperor always spent the six winter months; and before the Nihilist troubles began the life he led there was a pleasant one. Alexander II., as above said, never affected the Spartan simplicity of his father Nicholas, who used to sleep on a camp bed, eat of the most frugal fare and spend most of the time he could spare from state business in inspecting his soldiers. He (Alexander) was

THE CZAR AND HIS COURT

ADDICTED TO CONVIVIALITY

and home pleasures. He had a few very intimate friends—the Baristan skies, the Adlerbergs, Schouvaloffs, Blondoffs and others with whom he spent a good deal of his time, and from whom he heard all that went on in the world. Every evening one or other of these families attended the private court dinner, and afterwards charades or comediettas used to be performed either by the ladies and gentlemen of the court or by comedians from the French theater. During the daytime when it was fine the Emperor would take walking exercise in the public garden of the palace, the gravel walks of which were boarded over, and his only attendant was usually a big dog; or he would get into his sledge and drive about the city without escort. Sometimes he alighted and walked all down the Newski Prospect, looking into the shops, or he would stroll into some friendly house and pay a visit. He was known to everybody, but it was not the etiquette to salute him, still less to accost him; unless he courted recognition by one of those good natured nods of which he was never chary toward his personal acquaintances. All this however, came to an end last year, and the precautions taken to preserve the Czar made his life for a time absolutely burdensome. He was scarcely allowed to go out, and when he did so was closely followed by detectives with loaded revolvers and by an armed Cossack hetman, who walked beside him or sat opposite him in his carriage. The vehicle in which the Emperor rode, whether it were a coach or a railway carriage, was cased in iron, and it had nothing about it to attract attention. Thus in the streets, when several court carriages passed together the one that looked like the Czar's was never that which contained his Majesty; and on the railroads, the most brilliant saloon car remained empty, while the Emperor travelled in what appeared to be a second class compartment or baggage van. At one time the Czar was prevailed upon to wear a chain breastplate under his tunic, but though one of the lightest kind was made for him he could not bear its weight, and so the expedient was adopted of causing the tunic to be padded with cotton wool steeped in a preparation which hardened, if not bullet-proof,

EASY STYLE OF LIVING,

AT LEAST KNIFE PROOF,

and difficult for even a bullet to pierce at a long shot. An attempt was made some time ago to poison the Czar by sending him a petition covered with some noxious powder, since which time he has ceased to receive letters, papers, or petitions. For a similar reason he gave up smoking, though he used to like a cigar, and he has drank no wine but from bottles uncorked in his presence. In the imperial kitchen the Czar's food was prepared by a French cook, who plied his vocations under the eyes of two police guards—not that the cook himself could incur any suspicion, but because some conspirator might have got at the ingredients he was preparing. The food was always cooked in the simplest way, without sauces, and it was tasted by two officials before it was served at the Czar's table.—London Times.

THE LATE EARL

Sayings and Doings of the Late Lord Beaconsfield—Respects at the Queen's.

Lord Beaconsfield, just before his illness, strolled in the park in a very thin overcoat, and basked jauntily in the iced sunshine. He dined out at least five nights in the week.

Queen Victoria, on hearing of the serious illness of Beaconsfield, expressed her intention of going in person to see him, and only relinquished this intention at the request of his medical advisers, who feared that the excitement caused by so signal mark of the Queen's regard might be too much for the patient in his weak state.

TRIBUTE TO COBDEN.

Now that he is gone, Disraeli's eulogy on the death of Richard Cobden, one of his most ardent opponents, may with fitness be applied to the dead Earl. "There is this consolation," said Mr. Disraeli, "that these great men are not altogether lost to us; that their opinions will often be quoted in this House, their authority appealed to; their judgments attested, even their very words will form part of our discussions and debates. There are some men who though not present in the body are still members of the House, independent of dissolutions, of the caprice of constituencies, even of the course of time, and Richard Cobden is one of them."

ARRAIGNMENT OF PARTY.

The following is Disraeli's bitter denunciation of Sir Robert Peel and the Conservative party, when Peel adopted the free trade platform. It will be observed that he makes use of the term "organized hypocrisy," which was borrowed in later years by Sir Frances Hincks, in speaking on Canadian politics, and which has been erroneously credited to that politician: "The right honorable baronet, (repeated Disraeli) had once avowed that he was prouder of being leader of the country gentlemen of England than of being intrusted with the confidence of sovereigns. But where are the country gentlemen of England now? They are discovering the difference between the hours of courtship and the moments of possession; little is now said about them. When the beloved object has ceased to charm it is useless to appeal to the feelings. Instead of listening to their complaints the Premier sends down his valet.

A DISTRESSED FARMER,

to make it known that we are to have no "whining here. Such is the fate of the great agricultural interest—that beauty which everybody wooed and one deluded. Protection appears to be about in the same condition that Protestantism was in 1829. (Loud cheers from the Opposition.) The country will draw its moral. For my part, if we are to have free trade, I, who honor genius, prefer that such measures should be proposed by the hon. member for Stockport (Mr. Cobden) than by one who, though skilful in parliamentary manœuvres, has tampered with the generous confidence of a great people and of a great party. For myself, I care not what will be the result. Dissolve, if you like, the Parliament, you have betrayed, and appeal to the people who, I believe, mistrust you. For me, there remains this at least the opportunity of expressing thus publicly my belief that a Conservative Government is an organized hypocrisy."

FALLS INTO UNENDING SLEEP.

Lord Beaconsfield's refusal to take nourishment, combined with a renewal of the spasmodic attacks caused by the sudden return of cold east winds from which he suffered so much in the earlier stages of his illness, together produced a state of complete exhaustion; and when the final moment arrived he died as a weary man in health falls quietly and softly asleep. Mr. Ralph Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield's brother, was summoned immediately the more alarming symptoms set in, but arrived too late to witness the end. The fact that he died without receiving any of the consolations of sacraments of the Christian religion continues to be commented upon, and certain curious surmises are drawn. The Queen is said to have received the news of the Earl's death with great sorrow. Flags are displayed at half mast, and there is a general appearance of mourning and lamentation.

BROTHER OF THE STATESMAN.

Lord Beaconsfield has a brother Ralph Disraeli, living, who holds an office under the Government which pays $10,000 a year. Ralph has a son, Coningsby Disraeli, named after the hero of one of Beaconsfield's novels. It is believed that Beaconsfield has made an arrangement similar to that of the late Lord Broughams, by which his title will revert to his brother. The Earl himself has no children.

Concert at Ardoch.

The friends of the Arden C.M. Church held a tea and concert on the 9th inst., and $36.50 was realized to apply to Rev. Mr. Tapping's salary. He was also the recipient of a four story cake says the Arden Impromptu speeches were given. The musical part was all that could be desired. The Misses Osborn and Misses McGurl deserve praise. Excellent selections were rendered by Mrs. Mills and Mr. McGurl. Little Miss Price, daughter of M. W. Price and Miss Annie Reid gave readings. Robt. Paul, the father of Song, in Kennebec, sang a heart touching solo in memory of the departed and much lamented Esther Little, who died at Anticosti, Island a year ago. His last charge was at Arden before removing to Anticosti. Miss Wollard also assisted.

Reminders

Bellmen were appointed in London in 1556, to ring the bells at night and cry, "Take care of your fire and candle, be charitable to the poor, and pray for the dead." We are constantly reminded by circumstances to take care of our health, and preserve in a proper way our bodies. This, alas! is too often neglected. The dyspeptic and bilious are induced to make trial of some drug or patent medicine, which often aggravates the malady. Be sure and provide yourself with Baxter's Mandrake Bitters, they are highly prized by all who have used them, as the most effectual cure for all disorders of the stomach.

Zopess and Brazil.

As a result of the new commercial enterprise just as coming into existence with Brazil, is the introduction of Zopess so justly celebrated where it is known for the cure of all forms of Indigestion. The company have opened a laboratory in Toronto. Zopess comes to us highly endorsed and recommended, its certainly As relief and sure Dyspepsia and Constipation, makes this remarkable compound a necessity in Canada. The company make samples bottles at the trifling cost of 10 cents, to be had of Heath & Gunn and Henry Wade.

The Sea of Oblivion

would long since have swallowed up Pinsner in common with so many forgotten tooth pastes and dentifrices, did not the experience of a whole nation prove that it possesses signal advantages. It thoroughly cleans the teeth, disinfects and removing their impurities; it revives their fading whiteness and strengthens their relaxing hold upon their sockets; is rendered colorless, ulcerated gums heal and healthy, and besides neutralizing an unseemly breath invests it with its own fragrance.

Mr. Shandy's estimate of the cost of the Hochelaga terminus certainly amounted between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000. The estimate will be for a double track.
