CITY AND VICINITY.

PROBS.—Light to moderate winds fine warm weather.

SPURGEON.—Full particulars about the lecture on the great preacher next week.

47TH BATT.—The 47th Battalion officers are looking forward to going into camp this year.

BODY FOUND.—The body of a child was found in the bay near Anglin's saw mill this afternoon.

BIBLE REVISION.—To-morrow evening Rev. Mr. Carey, in St. Paul's Church, will preach on bible revision.

COMPLETED THEIR WORK.—The City Auditors have completed their labors, extending over a period of nearly three months. There is said to be a surplus of $2,518.92.

SOCIAL.—The Ladies Aid Association of the Queen Street Church intend giving a social on Thursday evening, May 5th. A first class programme may be expected.

REMEMBER the dedication of the new Oddfellows' Hall, McCammon's Block, on Tuesday next, at 3 o'clock, to which the public are invited. The concert in the evening will be a good one. Tickets limited.

LARGE FLOCK.—Mr. James Craig, township of Kingston, has ten sheep, eight of which have two lambs each, and two three lambs each, in all twenty-two. Stock raising, at this prolific rate, must be exceedingly profitable.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE UNIVERSITY.—This evening at six o'clock the results of the season's work in Queen's University will be made known. The name of the author of the poem will also be announced. The graduating class will be the largest that Queen's has ever sent out. It will probably number thirty-five.

EMIGRATION FROM MANITOBA.—A friend forwards us a copy of the Pembina Pioneer, in which the customs statistics for the month of March are recorded. The returns include the statement that there were during the month 59 actual immigrant entries from Manitoba. He adds in purple ink the cause of the exodus from Manitoba—N.P.

ROWING CLUB.—On Monday evening the adjourned meeting of the Kingston Rowing Club will be held. It should be both enthusiastic and decisive. The roll of membership is now quite long, and nothing remains but organization and the completion of arrangements which will make the summer campaign one of interest and pleasure.

SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS.—The Department of Education has given notice that the first class grade C non-professional examination will take place in Toronto, on Monday 18th July, the intermediate of the county towns and high schools on Monday the 11th, and the entrance on the 7th and 8th of the same month. There are many who will be interested in these examinations.

SYDENHAM ENTERTAINMENT.—The concert at Sydenham has proven most successful. Mr. D. Purdy and the Glee Club rendered some very pleasing music, and Rev. J. Young, of this city, delivered a lecture on "Tramps," which is described as having been amusing and instructive. The concert took place in the Town Hall, and the audience was large and attentive.

Primitive Methodist Church.

At the quarterly business meeting of the church, held on Thursday evening, it was found that there was a good nett increase of members after filling up a loss of twenty by removal and death. The various funds were also found to be in a satisfactory condition. The missionary fund had advanced more than a hundred per cent during the past five years. The board, by unanimous vote, invited Mr. Jolliffe to remain a sixth year. He replied that he should be happy to remain if conference so decided. He had been treated kindly and had no desire to change. Mr. W. S. Gordon and Mr. Jolliffe were elected delegates to the district meeting, which assembles at Sydenham May the 11th. Conference will meet in this city May 27th.

A Heavenly Display.

Last evening the planets Jupiter and Saturn were in conjunction. Observers of the heavens have seen them gradually drawing nearer together during their appearance as evening stars. When last seen, sinking in the west a little after sunset, they were near each other. They met and passed last night, but were not visible on account of their close proximity to the sun. Jupiter, moving on a smaller circle, passed to the east of Saturn and pursued his journey. When the two planets appear again in the east, they will be transposed and Saturn will rise first. They will linger near each other for sometime, finally to part company entirely. Jupiter will press on, leaving his companion whirling alone on his long track. The astrologers, of whom there are still a few, predict dire calamities from this conjunction.

Judge Cameron is named as likely to be raised to the vacancy on the Ontario Court of Appeals Bench. Mr. Drew, M.P. for North Wellington, is mentioned as his successor on the Queen's Bench, but his chances are poor, as Sir John declines to open any more constituencies.

RAILWAY THIEVES.—Thieves have been raiding upon pork barrels, grain bins and chicken sheds for several weeks past around Willets House, Pittsburg.

BIBLE REVISION.

Opinions of Clergymen and Others. Several of the City Clergymen.

Following the tactics of the Ottawa Citizen, Toronto Globe, and other newspapers, we deemed it expedient to solicit the opinions of the local clergy in regard to bible revision. That all might have a common basis of thought we prepared and submitted the following series of questions:

Was the revision of the bible necessary, and if so, for what reason?

What is your opinion of the men engaged in the revision?

What effect will the work have on the prevailing doctrines and upon the bible loving readers?

Will the changes commend themselves to those engaged in the study of the word? If so, why?

Will the revision have a beneficial effect on the people?

The answers we append:

REV. F. W. KIRKPATRICK.

We must be careful not to speak of a revision of the bible. It is only the revision of the English version of the bible that is in hand. This work can hardly be said to have been necessary, inasmuch as the old version has served its generations for 269 years and is beyond question the best version ever made into English, perhaps in any language.

(1.) The revision of the English version was, however, advisable in order to render it possible to make use of the stores of information on biblical matters accumulated during the last two centuries and a half. Our knowledge of the languages, customs, geography, &c., of the ancient world has largely been added to during this period.

(2.) The scholars engaged in this work are, beyond question, the foremost of the day. Bishops Elliott and Light foot have few equals in the critical study of the Greek text.

(3.) No well-informed Christian has any fear that his work will affect the doctrines of the gospel. It may take away the favourite texts of some, but the great doctrines of the Catholic faith will remain untouched.

Bible loving readers will undoubtedly be stimulated in their studies by the appearance of this new version.

(4.) It is impossible to say whether the changes will commend themselves to those engaged in the study of the Word until we know what the changes are. Many of the principles involved in these changes can only be understood by those who have made the matter the study of their lives. Most readers will not be qualified to pass an intelligent verdict upon the changes made. A far more important matter than that of the English of the revision is that which relates to the Greek text employed. Critical questions like this can hardly be entertained by the ordinary reader.

(5.) It is hard to say whether the public will be beneficially affected by the new version. It will be certainly helpful to sober minded, intelligent christians. It will hardly, however, without a prolonged trial, take the place of the present version. The question as to which will be in years to come, the bible for English readers will be determined by "the survival of the fittest." A version with the qualities of our present version will certainly not be easily dispossessed in the affections of the Anglo Saxon race.

REV. A. SPENCER, CLERICAL SECRETARY.

I think the revision necessary because the knowledge of the Greek and Hebrew languages has advanced since King James' version was made, and then a great many valuable and ancient manuscripts have come to light. I have no doubt the men engaged are among the most learned men of the present day, and the Conservative element in Christianity is largely represented, as the majority of the committee belong to the Church of England. The more advanced schools of thought are also represented. So far as the doctrines of the Church of England are concerned there will be no effect whatever except to confirm them. As to the readers those who are less informed will no doubt experience a shock, but unless they have joined their faith to the mere words of King James' version they will only be too glad to feel that they have the word of God in the purest form attainable. From my knowledge of the men engaged in the translation the work will commend itself to students of God's word, but no definite opinion can be given until after perusing the new version. Ultimately the version will have a beneficial effect for the public, but meanwhile scoffers will no doubt attempt to call in question the foundations of scriptural truth by alleging its uncertainty, and Roman Catholics will find in this revision (as they imagine) additional evidence of what they term the shiftiness of Protestantism.

REV. T. BOUSFIELD, ALL SAINTS.

The revision of the bible—English version—in my estimation was hardly necessary at the present time. The authorized version has made its way in the hearts of the people, has come to be received as an authority, and changes will only tend to unsettle the minds of ordinary people without a compensating benefit.

Some of the men are first class scholars, but on the whole I am not satisfied with the composition of the committee.

I think there will be no perceptible effect on the prevailing doctrines, and the new version will merely be useful to bible loving readers as a commentary to the present version. It is, of course, an advantage to have the Greek text itself, more accurately known than it could have been in the early part of the seventeenth century.

Many of the changes will be, doubtless, commended to those engaged in study of the word, as being more critically correct, but others again seem to be needless alterations weakening the force of expression, and by no means improving the style. The discovery of valuable ancient manuscripts in more modern times, and the increased opportunities and helps to the understanding of many passages, will, of course, be a great benefit, and will materially increase the accuracy of the translation.

I fear that the benefit on the public will not be as much as anticipated. The changes will help to shake the ordinary mind considerably with respect to the New Testament, and even unsettle the faith of many who now implicitly receive the authorized version, whilst the improvements will not be sufficient to make any perceptible change in present views nor add a great deal to spiritual knowledge.

REV. HENRY WILSON, B.D., ST. GEORGE'S.

(1.) As clergymen and theologians we all think it necessary. Many reasons could be given. I give one. Language changes. What might have been a very fair rendering of the original in the English of the 17th century might be imperfect in the 19th century owing to the changes in the English tongue. The bible of Wyckliffe served in the 14th century but was not desirable in the 17th century; so I consider it is with the present version.

(2.) I have the highest opinion of the men. They are of the highest standing, the deepest piety, broadest culture and learning in Hebrew and Greek. They feel before them the oldest manuscripts in the world, all the versions in nearly every tongue and especially the English versions. They bring to bear on the work the highest scholarships of this century. They are far more advanced in Greek criticism than were their predecessors of the 17th century.

(3.) I think there will be no material change in the doctrines of the Christian faith. No doctrine will be touched relative to the Catholic church at the first. Some good living Christians soul will no doubt be shaken, but they need not fear for a moment, that this vital change will be made or article of faith lost.

(4.) The work will commend itself to students of the bible with scarcely an exception. I feel that it will be a better exponent of the truth of God than our present version although it is an excellent one.

(5.) The effect on the public will be that it will stimulate men from mere curiosity to read and criticise it and may ultimately cause them to read it with a higher motive. There will be a great discussion, but I have no fear of the result. The truth of God is there and it cannot be shaken. The book that has stood the fire of criticism since the second century cannot be overturned by the nineteenth century critics or scholars.

THE VERY REV. PRINCIPAL GRANT, ST. PAUL'S.

The necessity for revision arises in part from the changes which 270 years make in language. Some words lose their meaning altogether. Many defective translations may be improved.

The revisors are some of the ablest living scholars. Some, quite as able, declined to take part in the work.

Cannot tell until the revised edition appears what will be the effect upon the prevailing doctrines of the day, but if the work be faithfully carried out church doctrine cannot fail to benefit by the revision.

Cannot anticipate the changes which may be made, but from the standing of the men engaged in the revision, there is every probability that the changes will commend themselves to the general reader. The revision will draw greater attention to the bible and will no doubt lead to its being more read than it is at present, and so cannot fail to be of benefit to the public.

REV. DR. ELLIOTT, SYDENHAM ST. CHURCH.

(1.) I don't think the revision was very necessary. The old Word was sufficient.

(2.) The revision committee is composed of eminent men both as to character and scholarship.

(3.) I think it will disturb some plain people who do not see any necessity for revision. They looked upon the bible as God's book, while the doctrine was considered sacred to them and to revise it will to a certain extent make them think that it may be handled like the products of the human intellect.

(4.) The changes will commend themselves generally to those engaged in the study of the bible.

(5.) I don't know what the effect will be, but ultimately I suppose it will be an advantage, but not immediately.

REV. J. M. HAGAR, QUEEN ST. METHODIST.

A revision was desirable because the exploration of bible lands and increase of knowledge of oriental languages and customs during the 250 years which have elapsed since King James' translation was made have placed within our reach materials which give us a better understanding of the meaning of the inspired writers. The recent discovery, also, of some very ancient manuscripts, notably the Sinaitic, is of immense advantage in determining the genuineness of certain texts about which doubts have heretofore existed.

The men engaged in the work of revision were taken from both hemispheres and were selected because of their scholarship, and may be taken as representatives of the biblical knowledge and criticism of the age. No new doctrine will be established by the revision, nor will any doctrine generally accepted by the churches be weakened or rejected. The changes chiefly effect form and the removal of error and obscurities. The chapters and verses of the present version will be replaced in the new by paragraphs determined as to length by the sense. This may seem a violent change, an unholy handling of things sacred, to some whose veneration of the bible has endeared and made sacred even the outward arrangement and appearance. But this objection will disappear when it is considered that the arrangement into chapters and verses is uninspired, and does not appear in the original manuscripts, and frequently interferes with the clearness of narration and the sequence of argument. Many obscure passages will be rendered clear and some errors in translation, which have given an advantage to the enemies of the truth, will be removed, so that it may be confidently predicted that the revision will result in the firmer establishment of the bible as God's word in the enlightened conscience and judgment of humanity. The fact that all leading Protestant denominations were represented on the Revision Committee will commend the revision to the favorable attention of the churches.

REV. MR. JOLLIFFE, P. M. CHURCH.

I consider the revision to be necessary, because of the many errors in translation in the present authorized version. Many words employed by the translators had a different meaning then from what they have now. The culture, and the piety of the men is a guarantee that the task has been faithfully performed. The pet theories of some may be rudely shaken, but the fundamental doctrines of Christianity will not and cannot suffer. I do not apprehend that people generally will be in haste to lay aside the old book endeared as it is by a thousand sacred memories, but when they compare the old with the new and find that the revised testament conveys more clearly to the mind the great truths which God has made known to men, they will regard it as a treasure and a blessing. It will in all probability awaken a greater interest in bible study. While some may read to gratify an idle curiosity no doubt thousands will be benefitted for time and eternity.

REV. DR. JACKSON, FIRST CONGREGATIONAL.

While the revision of the bible was not absolutely necessary I think it was very advisable for the reasons that biblical study has since the former translation received attention from the chief scholars of the age, and a vast amount of knowledge has been gained which was not available to the former translators. Many more ancient MSS. of the scriptures, some of which have been but recently discovered, are now available for comparison than were at the disposal of the translators, and the languages of these is better understood. It is known to all critical students of the bible that there are errors in the present version, (which while they do not affect any leading truth should certainly be corrected) as also the obsolete English words. I have no doubt but the result of the revision will tend to confirm the faith of the world in the Word.

The men who are engaged in the present revision are taken from the leading scholars of the age and are representative of nearly all the branches of the church, and, therefore, are worthy of the fullest confidence.

I think that the new revision will have very little influence upon the leading doctrines at present held by the church, and that the general effect will be to confirm faith in the correctness of the bible.

While there may be prejudices in the popular mind against the new version it is likely that scholars and devout searchers after the truth will receive the revision with great gratification, and that gradually it will win its way into general use and prove to be a lasting benefit to mankind.

REV. P. MCCUAIG, CHALMER'S CHURCH.

1. The revision was desirable because many words in the language have changed their meaning and because the science of biblical criticism has made much progress within the past century.

2. The men, without exception, are notable scholars, though, perhaps, not all the best biblical scholars of the age.

3. I don't think the revision will affect in the least degree any fundamental doctrine in the scripture, but it will draw public attention to the scriptures and greatly add to the number of bible readers.

4. It is impossible to answer until the work is before the public. Biblical scholars, outside of the revision committee must be fully heard on the subject.

5. That depends upon the correctness of the revision. If the mind of God's spirit is more fully brought out the effects will be beneficial.

REV. DR. SMITH, ST. ANDREW'S.

From the well known reputation of the scholars engaged in the revision of the bible it is likely that it will be generally acceptable to Protestants.

The very novelty of the coming translation will likely secure for it a very extensive reading which is always highly desirable—for, much as a new translation has been desirable, a better use of the present translation has been still more desirable.

Its introduction to pulpits of the churches will probably be retarded by the love of many for the familiar words of the old book.

REV. PRINCIPAL GRANT, QUEEN'S COLLEGE.

The reverend gentleman considered the revision a work of necessity, but would give no definite opinion respecting it until after the work had been published. He thought it inopportune to make any statements.

REV. A. WILSON, BROCK ST. PRESBYTERIAN.

As far as I am able to judge the changes are not of such importance as to materially benefit ordinary readers.

BISHOP CLEARY.

Our reporter interviewed Bishop Cleary, but his lordship could say little about a book which he had not seen, and the revision of the Bible can not affect the Catholic people.
