Hancock's Inspirator

IS THE MOST ECONOMICAL APPLIANCE KNOWN for feeding boilers or pumping purposes, on account of the great range of its duties, and the small expenditure of steam required for working it. It is intended to take the place of Pumps and Injectors and may be used in their stead to great advantage. It differs materially, both in its

Construction & Working Qualities

from the class of boiler feeders known as Injectors—inasmuch as it has one set of tubes for lifting and another set of tubes for forcing water—a combination entirely new, reliable and efficient. They are simple to operate, always ready for use and altogether a very reliable feed for boilers.

PAMPHLETS OF INSTRUCTION furnished on application, also testimonials if required. We guarantee every Inspirator according to recommendation or no charge.

THE MADMAN'S POEM.

I float in my boat
Like a note from the throat
Of a bird in the balmy air,
And I sing, and I swing,
Like a bird on the wing,
And I [illegible] the everywhere;
For no one can see, yes, no one but me,
My own love sitting there.
'Tis strange, 'tis strange,
'Tis wonderful strange
That people will ask me "where,"
When I point to my Maud,
Who was sent me from God,
And urge that she's sitting there,
And point to the eyes
That rival the skies,
And finger her wonderful hair.
They say that she's dead,
Long, long, has been dead,
While their faces turn rigid and pale,
And they speak of the bed,
Of the beautiful dead,
In a ghastly but wonderful vale,
But they can't obscure
My eyes, for I'm sure
I see her sit there in my boat,
Trailing her fingers
In water that lingers,
And loves o'er her white hands to float,
And to follow the arm,
So pure-like and warm,
Till it pearls all her sparkling throat.
Then they say I am mad,
But they never had
A love for her beauty like me;
They never shall bury her,
For her lover will ferry her
Far o'er the whispering sea.
That figure must be her,
And they'll never see her,
Ah, no one forever but me;
But I wish she would speak,
Yet there she sits meek,
And never a word will she say,
Through the secret, full night,
To the breaking of light,
Nor all through the wonderful day.
But we will keep sailing,
And she will keep bailing
A palmful of water for me.
Oh, I will keep rowing,
And she will keep sowing
Her soul in the solemn-like sea.
For aye and forever,
For ever and ever,
We twain will be lovers and free.

TESTAMENT REVISION.

Rev. Mr. Cook Views the Work With Gratitude—Authority for the Changes.

Yesterday morning Rev. C. A. Cook preached upon the revision of the New Testament. His text was:

"The word of God is not bound."—II. Timothy ii—9.

When the apostle wrote these words he was a prisoner in Rome, but while he was bound the word of God was not so; though the messenger was chained its message was free, and borne on the wings of prayer and forth it still spread the gracious influence far and wide. "The word of God is not bound." Never in the history of the world have these words been more true than they are to-day. At one time the word of God was, in a sense, bound. Some two centuries have passed since it was chained to the pulpit in the churches. But that day is gone, and gone forever. The word of God was never more free than it is to-day. Scarce a fortnight has passed since the revised edition of the New Testament issued from the press, but already the word has been scattered throughout the world and is to-day in the hands of millions of people on two continents. Never has there been such a complete triumph for the gospel as this. Every modern invention has been employed for its spread—the steam printing press, the ocean steamship, and the electric telegraph. William Arnott has said that men are busy girding the world with a net-work of electric wires, that each state covers its own territory for its own purposes, but when complete God appropriates the whole to Himself to scatter His own message in every language and in every land. How soon this saying has been partially fulfilled. Two weeks ago the entire New Testament was telegraphed from New York to Chicago in a single night. With joy we hail this

NINETEENTH CENTURY TRIUMPH

and look forward with prophetic vision to see a more extensive application of the Arnott thought, when we may sing with increased earnestness

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Doth his successful journeys run.

It may be asked, to-day, why has this work been done? Why has the New Testament, with its language so grand and yet so simple, serving its purpose so long and so well—why has it been revised? Why has it not been allowed to remain as it was? Is the word not infallible, unchangeable, unalterable? If so, was the revision advisable, necessary, and wise? One thing should be understood by everyone, that the simple alteration of certain words and phrases and sentences do not necessarily make any alteration in the truth which is expressed by them. Truth is the same, and must remain the same forever. The word of God, which is the embodiment of all truth, must remain unchanged throughout the ages. No number of men even if they desired such a thing, could not, therefore, in this sense make any change in the Scripture. The revisers made no alteration of the truth, but as they say in the preface to the new work, "Our task was a revision not retranslation." We have, then, not the revised New Testament with a new gospel but the old gospel more clearly and fully expressed. Now if it be asked if the revision was advisable and wise he would emphatically reply "yes." The new work afforded greater clearness, and, moreover the changes rested on the

AUTHORITY OF ANCIENT COPIES

of God's Word, which were not available to the King James translators. The old revision has its defects. When we remember the great disadvantages under which the translators worked, the wonder is that they (the defects) are not more numerous and serious. When the King James translators 270 years ago did their work the material they had was but fifteen MSS. of a comparatively modern date, and these MSS. were likely to be filled with mistakes, simply because they were not close copies of the originals. The present translators had 1760 MSS., many of them dating far back and very near to the original MSS., and, of course, on that account, being nearer, were more correct. Then should the light and information and correctness to be obtained from these MSS. be kept in the background? Would we, as a Christian people, would the world, be the better without the benefits to be derived from them? No one would answer "No." In his opinion the changes

WERE INESTIMABLY PRECIOUS.

Since the day the New Testament was for sale in the city he had read many chapters of it and compared the new version with the old. So far he had been delighted. New light had been thrown upon the sacred pages, and many passages that had appeared uncertain in meaning were now clearly understood and enjoyed by him. The greatest lover of the word of God will not find the orthodox doctrines which they have loved and cherished in the least changed. The foundations of Christianity have not been disturbed. He urged the interest [illegible] ed the stimulus given the people. [illegible] fact that the revision has taken place will not lose its force until the name of Jesus is loved in every land and by every heart. Such a future is not far distant. "The word of God is not bound," it still goes forth conquering and to conquer. He likened the revised New Testament to a lamp which had been re-filled with oil and re-trimmed in order to brighten the more the path of those who are seeking divine guidance; and if the people were without excuse before for their transgressions how much more are they without excuse now? He trusted they would be doers of the word and not hearers only. It is sad to know the word, but sadder still to be acquainted with it and not practice what it teaches. This fact should be [illegible]—that the revised Testament supplied no new gospel for the unsaved. It still points to "Jesus Christ as the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world;" it still says "repent," "the blood of Jesus cleanseth from sin;" "he that believeth in the Son shall have eternal life;" it still speaks of a judgment, a heaven and a hell. The gospel is the same in regard to these great doctrines. With the changes, however, there has come increased light and he is a wise one who believes in and becomes a follower of Jesus Christ.

THE KEELY MOTOR

A Most Remarkable Machine—Is it to be the Engine of the Future?

A despatch from Philadelphia, dated Saturday afternoon, says: The first public exhibition of the Keely engine was given this evening in the presence of a large body of prominent engineers and others. The two parts of the "motor" called the "generator" and the "engine," stand in separate rooms on the second floor of a building on Twentieth street in the vicinity of Girard College. Without expressing an opinion whatever regarding the scientific principles alleged to be involved a simple narrative of the evening's occurrence may be set down as follows:

CURIOUS EXPERIMENTS.

When the visitors, almost completely filling the front room, had been seated, they saw before them an odd looking machine, built of steel, that shone like a mirror. The only description possible to give, without an illustration to accompany it, is that it is wholly unlike any other collection of globes and tubes that has ever been exhibited. The first act was to remove every cock and tube ostensibly to show that the apparatus was empty. Lights were placed underneath it, and the visitors were invited to look into and through the various chambers. All the plugs and attachments having been replaced one of the company drew a glass of water from the hydrant and poured the contents into half a dozen funnel topped tubes, and in exactly twenty nine seconds

FORCE WAS GENERATED

sufficient to raise a six foot lever (one inch fulcrum), upon which were hung 700 pounds of iron. The pressure was asserted to be 15,000 pounds to the square inch. The vapor said to create this heavy pressure was then stored in a steel cylinder about thirty inches long and five inches thick, through the centre of which is stretched a piece of piano wire. The vapor thus confined was then further "vivified" by external vibrations of great energy obtained from a tuning fork of immense size. This done, a long tube, of very constricted orifice, was attached to this steel chamber to form the connection with the engine in the rear room. Thither, then, all the visitors moved. The engine is called a "compound" one, which is explained to mean that "it can be worked with equal effect by positive or negative energy." After a few rocks had been applied the "sprophone" contained in one of the drums began to roar, and the shaft carrying a belt wheel began to revolve with great velocity. The whizzing sound (much resembling the rising of a flock of quail) gradually became and the engine settled down to a regular speed of about sixty revolutions per minute. Some curious experiments were then made to exhibit what was denominated "vibratory energy." The revolutions of the engine were increased or diminished at will by Mr. Keely striking an iron disc or gigantic tuning fork, or drawing a bow over a tightly stretched steel wire. The change from the negative to the positive energy was made, resulting in an almost instantaneous reversal of the engine. This reversal, Mr. Keely declared, could be made at the very highest velocity without breaking anything. A brake, specially made with wooden lining, was then applied to the belt wheel with a leverage of five feet, and the weight of two of the heaviest of the party but no perceptible diminution in the speed resulted. Many other strange experiments with the vapor gun and other appliances of the alleged invention were given, after which the party separated.

REGULAR AND HARMONIOUS,

The experiments lasted three hours and were in every way successful.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT.

Agitation for Economy—Public Picnic Suggested Best Means of Reaching a Given Purpose.

On Saturday afternoon a meeting was held in the Waggoner House of the Committee appointed at a public meeting held at Cataraqui to devise some plan whereby a saving can be effected in the expense of county government, and of the best method of bringing about changes that are deemed desirable. Mr. J. M. Fair again occupied the chair, and of the prominent agitators in this matter there were present Messrs. J. McGrath, D. J. Waggoner, and J. Wolfe, Storrington; Messrs. John Irwin, R. Gibson, J. Ferris, J. Craig, and J. L. Haycock, township of Kingston; M. Graves, Pittsburg; and a number of others, some of whom paid close attention to the business of the meeting, while some others took part in the discussion. It was suggested that a picnic should be held, at some convenient point at an early date, at which the feeling of the ratepayers could be sounded and a memorial prepared for presentation to the Government. The proposition was favorably received but not adopted, the question being left over until the next meeting of the Committee, to be held on the 16th June, when the County Council will be in session and a debate may be expected to take place upon the economical scheme which the electors are seeking to develop. Two points have been advocated with considerable warmth by perhaps the majority of the committee, namely a gerrymandering of the municipalities so that there shall be an abolition of the sectional lines, and a reduction in the number of legislators, it being held that seven men, elected to act as fairly for all parts of the county, can do the work of the present County Council at a much lighter cost. There were some differences of opinion, of course, as to how the object aimed at was to be reached, but generally the meeting was harmonious and of good cheer. Interesting developments may be expected on the 16th.

It may not be out of place to add that the state of the County Treasury is such that a reduction in the rate of taxation is expected to be made at the June session. Our information comes from a source which we consider reliable.
