Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR DISEASES OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS, SUCH AS COUGHS, COLDS, WHOOPING COUGH, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA AND CONSUMPTION.

The few connections which have won the confidence of mankind and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured so wide a reputation, or maintained it so long as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known, to the public about forty years, by a long continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it confidence in its virtues, never equaled by any other medicine. It has long maintained the most effectual curse of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed those dangerous diseases of their terrors to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their painful effects, that is well founded, if the remedy be taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its early use in sudden attacks.

Angel of death, we question not
The mandate of Heaven, why does it rain?
Since we know that for its use

He giveth his beloved sleep.

DOCTORS' DISPUTES.

Dr. Bliss Assuming Control of President Garfield's Case—Feelings Expressed in Strong Language.

When the President was shot physicians were summoned from every quarter, and within half an hour he was surrounded by a full dozen of practitioners. Dr. Susan Edson is a homœopathist, and she is Mrs. Garfield's physician. Colonel Joshua H. Baxter, M.D., United States Army, who holds the further position of the Chief Medical Purveyor of the United States Army, has attended the President and his sons, but was away at the time the shooting occurred. He travelled on Saturday night from Williamsport, Pa., drove at once to the house and entered the room where, at the very time, a consultation was being held. Present at it were Dr. D. W. Bliss, of accorded high reputation in the surgical branch of his profession; Surgeon General Wales, of the navy; Dr. Townshend; Dr. Pattison, Coroner of the district; Dr. Hamilton, Surgeon General of the Marine Hospital Service; Dr. H. S. Lincoln; Dr. Woodward, United States Army; Dr. Norris, United States Army; Dr. Gunnell, United States Navy; Dr. Purvis, Dr. Parker, Dr. Reyburn and one or two others.

QUESTION OF PROBING FOR THE BULLET.

The consultation had been based on Dr. Bliss' reports of the condition of the patient. None of the others had seen him that morning, and Dr. Bliss had given in much detail the situation of affairs. Saturday night there had been a tilt between the Surgeon General of the Navy and Dr. Bliss that had caused the other doctors present to elevate their eyebrows and look for some further issue. When Dr. Bliss arrived on the scene he took possession of the case in a way with which he is identified in the minds of his brother practitioners, and which by some at least is spoken of as arrogant and dictatorial. He was explaining to the doctors that he had used the probe very carefully and had touched the pistol ball. Surgeon General Wales said, "You should, I think, have inserted your little finger to discover the course of the bullet." Dr. Bliss made no direct answer, and Dr. Wales carried out his own suggestion and brought to light some features that are understood to have some important bearing on the case, and in the light of which the course of treatment was changed. On Sunday morning the physicians who had been called in consultation came with an expectation of seeing the patient, but were met by Dr. Bliss, who had informed them that everything had been done, and he was now able to secure the President that degree of quiet that he so much needed by telling them all about it. Nothing was said, and the consultation went forward, and when it was finished Dr. Bliss said there would be another in the afternoon. All of them left then but Drs. Reyburn and Baxter.

QUARREL BETWEEN BLISS AND BAXTER.

What ensued is thus described by an eye witness:

Dr. Baxter said: "I will now go in with you and see the President."

"What for?" queried Dr. Bliss.

"Why, I am the family physician," replied Dr. Baxter, in apparent surprise.

"And how did you find that out, pray?" asked Dr. Bliss.

"I don't understand what you mean," replied Dr. Baxter, hotly. "Explain yourself."

"I mean," was Dr. Bliss' answer, "that you are always sneaking around trying to prescribe to some official. Now, you want to steal this case from me—that's your game."

"Sir!" said Dr. Baxter, advancing toward him.

"That is the exact fact," interrupted Dr. Bliss, "You are always seeking to prescribe for those in authority—any one who will help you to lobby your schemes through Congress."

"You lie when you say that," replied Dr. Baxter, "I am the family physician of Mr. Garfield."

Dr. Bliss came forward as if he would strike Dr. Baxter, but Dr. Bliss' son intervened, and catching Dr. Baxter by the coat said in a high tone of voice: "I have got something to say about this. This is my affair, father."

Dr. Baxter made reply that this was not the place for such a scene, and taking up his hat prudently retired from the room and left the Executive Mansion.

MRS. GARFIELD'S BRAVERY.

The President waited anxiously for his wife's arrival, which was delayed by the breaking down of the engine seventeen miles outside of Washington. At 6:30 p.m. on Saturday Mrs. Garfield was met by her son, James A. Garfield, jr., Mrs. James and Attorney-General MacVeagh. She placed her hands in those of Mrs. James, and directing a piercing inquiry into her eyes, exclaimed interrogatively, "Well?" "Oh, everything is going on beautifully," said Mrs. James, in reply, "only he must not be excited. You must be very calm when you meet him." Mrs. Garfield had nerved herself for the ordeal, and she answered simply but with great firmness, "I can do it." The party then went sadly up the stairs, young James A. Garfield with his arm about his mother's waist. Arrived in the library, everybody but Mrs. Garfield paused, and the doctors withdrew with bowed heads from the President's chamber. Mrs. Garfield passed quickly in, and the door was closed. Of that solemn meeting between husband and wife no record will ever be given. The two were alone together, without witnesses. At the end of about 15 minutes the door opened, and Mrs. Garfield came slowly out. There were no tears in her eyes, and she walked with a firm step and took her seat in the library. She was very brave and bore up nobly under the great blow which had fallen upon her. As she left the room Mrs. James passed in. The President was smiling, and he beckoned with his finger to the lady to approach. She leaned over the President and he said, "Have you met Crete?" Mrs. Garfield replied that she had met her, and Mrs. James asked how does she act? how did she bear it? was the next eager question. "She bore it like the true wife of a true soldier, answered Mrs. James. "Ah, the dear little rogue," exclaimed the President, "I knew it was a pet name by which the President and Mrs. James addressed Crete, and I knew she would cause a relapse to her. Soon after Miss Mollie entered the room. She, too, was very brave, and forced herself to assume a calmness which she could not feel. Advancing steadily toward her father as he lay on what was supposed to be his death bed, she said: "Oh, papa, I'm so glad to get back to you, but I'm so sorry to see you in this way. Then she kissed him, and the President, putting his arms around her neck, exclaimed: "Mollie, you're a brave, good little girl." "Well, I'm not going to talk with you now," said the stout hearted little girl, as she tenderly removed his arm from her neck; "wait till you get well," and with these parting words she kissed him again and turned and walked from the room, followed by a beaming smile from the President.

LAND LEAGUE.

It is Not Dying Out—Sam Has Parnell An Invention of the Enemy Plain Talk.

In an interview with a Globe reporter in Montreal the following is recorded:

Reporter—It is said that the Land League is everywhere breaking down that the receipts from America are falling off, and that the agitation will soon subside.

Miss Parnell—The telegrams which state these things are concocted in the landlord interest and very probably never crossed the Atlantic cable at all, but were made up in New York. I need hardly tell you, as a newspaper man, that the public get their news from the other side of the water very much diluted. There is a regular system of falsification pursued in the interests of aristocracy and landlordism. It is always safe to set down any report touching these questions as probably unfounded until it is thoroughly verified. As to the receipts from America that part of the story is very easily disproved, as every week the amounts received by Father Walsh, the Treasurer of the Land League in the United States, and by others are published, and they continue to average five or six thousand dollars weekly. About $1,000 per week is also forwarded by the Ladies' Land League, the latter fund being devoted entirely to the relief of the evicted tenants and prisoners. I wish to see the Ladies' League throughout the country send their money to the Irish Ladies' Land League in Dublin, rather than through the other channels. As it is the Ladies' League contribute nearly half the total of the amounts forwarded. No, the League is not going to die out, that is an invention of the enemy. The English Government are being put to tremendous expense by the method of passive resistance adopted by the League. They cannot continue a system of evictions and arrests with the aid of large bodies of police and military for ever. Another year of it would be almost as costly as a foreign war. If the people will only stand together in the same determined spirit they have hitherto shown they are certain to carry their point. Before long the English people will be clamoring for like reforms in their system, for the ideas of the Land League are spreading very rapidly in Great Britain, and the masses are being educated as to their rights. Joseph Arch has done a great deal in this direction, but he is hardly enough of an agitator, he does not rouse sufficient enthusiasm.

Presidential Pistol Practice.

While busy in drawing all manner of morals and lessons from the murderous assault upon President Garfield, our United States contemporaries forget to remind their readers that there is altogether too much pistol carrying indulged in in that country. It is probable that Mr. Garfield would have been shot even if there had been a law in existence forbidding the carrying of revolvers without a special license, but it is also just possible that he might not have been. It is familiarity with shooting and shooting irons that begets the quick resort to the bullet so common among our neighbors. Nearly every boy has his pistol and his gun. As he grows up he hears or reads of how some local hero has washed out an insult in blood, and when the time comes for him to avenge his own wrongs, he flies for his pet weapons and opens upon his adversary at sight. It is quite true that it is not possible to altogether suppress the practice of carrying pistols, but it is possible to abate it, and to render it ill legal and unfashionable. Many a brawl that would have ended in nothing more serious than a bout at fisticuffs, if the brawlers had been unarmed, has resulted in murder, simply because some of the party happened to be "heeled," as the frontiersman say. The Blake Act has done something to suppress the nuisance in this country, but it is not sufficiently stringent. Our neighbours might profitably adopt and improve it to meet their own wants.—Toronto News.

Effects of Revision.

When the revised version of the New Testament first appeared, some of our Toronto clergymen expressed the opinion that it would be generally adopted by the churches. It is just possible that their outspokenness may yet turn out to have been ill advised. In England, at any rate, the revised version will have to force its way through a good deal of ecclesiastical terrorism before it will replace the authorized version. A recent meeting of the Anglican bishops of England, it is reported, decided against departing from the use of the latter in public worship. The Bishop of London has informally obtained a legal opinion showing that the law enforces the same view, which was also recently put forth by the Lord Chancellor in a letter to the Bishop of Lincoln. We do not know what course will be taken in Canada, but it is not likely that the Episcopal Church here will move in advance of the mother church in England.—Toronto World.

Holloway's Pills.

THE FEMALE'S FRIEND.—So soon as the human functions are disordered they should be rectified. It is a hopeless delusion to leave the malady to its own course. A few appropriate doses of Holloway's Pills at the proper period will prevent many a serious
