A Grateful Husband.

Toronto, 24th March, 1879.

Mr. Wintercorbyn,—Dear Sir, I wish to tender you my heartfelt thanks for the benefit my wife has derived from the use of your Hair Restorer. Some few years since she nearly lost all her hair, and what little remained turned grey. We tried every remedy in the market, some of them claiming to be wonderful discoveries, and all to no purpose. Having seen an advertisement of your discovery, we availed ourselves of it as a last resource. I am now happy to state that it not only restored the hair to its natural color, but brought in new hair where the old had fallen and my wife has to-day as good a head of hair as any lady in our city.

Yours respectfully,

POPULAR MUSIC

Miss Arabella Root and her Music—Two Pretty Songs.

Kingstonians now take a deep interest in Miss Arabella Root, the bride of Mr. Robert del Ara, stage, formerly of this city, and a noted American vocalist. She has long been a favorite in U.S. musical circles, and we trust that Canada will soon learn something of her personally. She, in very early years, was a prodigy of musical skill, and has had the best of professional training in order to develop a remarkable talent. By continued generosity and zeal, combined with artistic attainments, she has made a great name socially and artistically, and is justly entitled to be called, according to the words of one of New York's leading journals "Our American Florence Nightingale." Miss Root is indefatigable in the cause of charity, giving concerts frequently for worthy objects. Miss Root is a composer, as well as a vocalist, and we give below the words of two of her songs. The music, also her own composition, we can vouch for as good:

MY LOVING TENDER MOTHER.

Oh, the days of sunny childhood,
How they pass before my mind
And she joys among the wildwood,
With my little playmates kind;
In my memory still there linger
Thoughts of one to me most dear.
One who cheered me in my sorrow,
With a smile or with a tear.
Oh, sinless was my tender mother,
Loving guide of childhood's days.
One who loved more than another,
With a love most true always.

Oh, what name so dear as Mother's,
What so sweet to every ear.
As this name above all others,
That we lovingly revere.
Oh, what friend on earth so faithful,
Or so kind her whole life through,
As the mother of our childhood,
Whose dear love proves always true.
Oh, have ye a tender mother?
Ponder love her while you may,
For she will not always linger,
Far too soon she'll pass away.

"FAR AWAY, BY-AND-BY."

The the world may seem cold, dark and dreary,
The the hard times may come and never go,
The our life may be sad, love and weary,
There's a balm for our sorrow and our woe.

Far away, by-and-by,
We shall find a sweet balm for our woe.
Far away, by-and-by,
We shall find a sweet balm for our woe.

The the heart may be bowed down with sorrow
The the ills of this life seem hard to bear,
We shall find in the glad bright to-morrow
A sweet rest from our trouble and our care.

PRAIRIE EMPIRE.

Extract From Another Letter Written by Rev. Principal Grant to the "Globe."

The best view of Winnipeg is from the roof of the City Hall. There is no eminence in or around the city. The level prairie stretches all around, away to a distant horizon; and, therefore, ascending some housetop is the way to get a good view. From this Pisgah a line of wood sweeping south, and then away to the west shows you the course of the Assiniboine. A rising ground called the Stony Mountain, an outcrop of limestone—gives a well defined horizon to the north. The penitentiary buildings are situated here. Although the distance is fourteen miles you can see them distinctly. Immediately to the eastward, and on the other side of the Red River, is St. Boniface Cathedral, the Archbishop's palace, and the extensive new college of St. Boniface, towering up from the trees that surround it. A large grist mill indicates where the Red River and Assiniboine meet. The city is at your feet, striding irregularly across the prairie, every building seen distinctly in the marvellously clear atmosphere. Nowhere does the dome of heaven seem so large as on the prairie. The amplitude of the sky [illegible] room for more cloud perspective than can be seen elsewhere, and the effects as regards stratification and cumulus are very beautiful, especially as the sky is generally flecked with clouds. The air is pure and exhilarating, quickening the pulse and giving buoyancy to the step. You see few lean forms and sallow faces in Winnipeg. The type of form and countenance is British and Canadian, and it is quite evident that Canadians are the pioneers of their own North-West.

THROUGH THE STREETS.

Having taken a general view of the city and surrounding country it is worth while to walk through the streets. Building is going on in every direction. Everyone is busy. Labourers get $2 a day, and bricklayers and carpenters $4. Lumber is very dear, as it is brought from considerable distances, but the principal buildings are now veneered with a whitish brick made in the neighbourhood. I first walked down Main street, which is two chains wide, to Fort Garry, and found that modern vandals had improved away its old stone wall and picturesque bastions, the stones having been required for the foundation of the H.B. store. This was the spirit that dictated the demolition of the ancient gates of Quebec. One would think that even savages—the characteristic of whom is that they live only in the present and care only for the gratification of immediate appetite—would have more regard for the memorials of the past, especially where these are few and far between.

WINNIPEG'S MATERIAL WANTS.

With regard to the natural wants of Winnipeg, four things are urgently required—gas, good water, gravelled or paved streets, and a system of sewers suited to a city where the frost level and the river level are about the same. Gas works are being constructed, water is to be introduced by the direct system from the Assiniboine next spring; and attention is being given to other matters. Between these and the Louise Railway Bridge and the bonus to the Syndicate, the citizens are likely to know soon enough what self-government costs, but the last thing they can be charged with is "an ignorant impatience of taxation." The land speculators are the men who usually grudge the payment of taxes.

See to it!

Zozma (from Brasil) will cure the worst case of dyspepsia. A single dose will relieve in a degree that shows its wonderful curative powers and its peculiar action upon the stomach and digestive organs. It is a positive and absolute cure for costiveness and constipation, acting in a remarkable way upon the system, carrying off impurities. As a liver regulator its actions are most remarkable. It tones and stimulates the liver to action, it corrects the acids and regulates the bowels. A few doses will surprise you. Sample bottles 10 cents, at Wade's, or Heath & Gunn's drug stores.

Costiveness.

This distressing complaint is not only dangerous of itself, but a fruitful source of other diseases in young and old. It is relieved immediately and permanently cured by DR. HERRICK'S SUGAR-COATED PILLS, which free the system from all pains and obstructions.

GUITEAU'S CRIME.

An Alleged Conspiracy of the Fortune-Tellers—Prophecy Must Soon Have to be Fulfilled.

The following letter has been addressed to the New York World, the allegations in which, if true, add but one more to the already heavy calendar of crime of which these impudent impostors have been guilty:

SIR,—Guiteau may be a man of unbalanced mind, but he is not a maniac. There is a method in everything he undertakes. Everything seems to point at the fact that certain fortune tellers first prophesied the assassination of President Garfield and then hired Guiteau to perform the dastardly deed.

In March last a fortune teller (whose address I enclose) doing business in New York, speaking of the President said: "There is one bad direction for the early summer. Saturn having been directly opposite Mars at his birth there will be a disturbance about May 20." On the twentieth day of May, 1881, Guiteau first set out to hunt down the President. This is according to a statement made by the assassin himself on the day he shot Mr. Garfield. Inconsistently for exactly six weeks Guiteau was engaged in his bloody design. Last November a lady (whose name I enclose), now residing in Prince street, Brooklyn, was told by a female astrologer with whom she then lived that the next President would be shot, since a combination of fortune tellers had formed a pool and would soon employ an assassin to execute their purpose, that their prophecies would then come to pass and that an immense amount of money would be realized; that after ward other prominent men would be shot. The first person to commiserate the condition of the imprisoned assassin was a fortune teller. She carried to the gaol on Sunday, July 3, a basket of food consisting of boiled chicken, cup-custard, a sponge cake, and some delicacies. She was an elderly woman, and declined to give her name. Lately three veiled ladies visited Guiteau's cell. One of these women was recognized to be a wealthy fortune teller from Illinois—the State Guiteau comes from. Is not Guiteau a soothsayer, having predicted the time of Christ's second coming, and having written a book on the subject? Guiteau only shams insanity. Guiteau did not shoot the President to secure an office; he is shrewd enough to know that such means would not secure him it. Guiteau's purpose was to secure a share of the conspirators' fund, and he hopes some day to enjoy the same.

CHURCH PROPERTY

Judging Things on Their Merits—Drawing the Line in Regard to Taxation.

[Edward Everett Hale.]

Time was, in New England, and still is in certain parts of it, when the pastor of the "First Church" was not merely the minister or servant of a single congregation, but of the whole town. Meeting-houses were built from the town's own treasury, and the house was large enough for every man and woman who desired to enter it. Such churches were public charities, and their ministers were public servants, responsible for the highest well-being, the education, the manners, the morals, and the religion, not only of those who worshipped within their walls, but of the community at large. But there has grown up within a generation, particularly in the large towns, a habit of building what are practically private chapels—almost as much so, we suppose he would say, as many of the pagan temples were in Greece and Rome—where a

WELL EDUCATED PARISH

engages a brilliant and pious minister to serve it and although men do not say in words, nor think systematically, that these chapels are their own private religious club houses, and the ministers their consecrated stewards of the clubs, yet their practice, says Mr. Hale, amounts to this. Such private charities he would tax, just as he would tax a private library or a private school. Ministers would do work outside such churches are Christ's churches, free as air to all comers, but they are not thus free. They were built at the cost of certain persons who own them, whose property they are, and whose right to enter them is above the right of those whom they invite. Mr. Hale believes there is no reason why churches which

ACTUALLY DO PUBLIC DUTY

as in opening drunkards' [illegible] 12th and 13th streets [illegible] great bargain while [illegible] should not be respected as such; nor does he see why churches which fail of this, and which virtually exist as private clubs, should not be taxed. He would take all churches in turn, and then credit those which do work outside their own families with the work thus done, showing the officers of assessment every year a precise account of the money they had spent in public charities. The church must be judged by its fruits, he concludes, and among the fruit a commonwealth has a right to exact and sit in judgment on, the most important is the higher life of the community in which the church exists.

What Pyæmia Is.

Pyæmia is derived from two words, which mean pus in the blood. It is produced by the taking up of ichorous pus into the circulation, and carrying it until it is lodged in some of the smaller capillaries, when it results in abscesses. The principal symptoms are high fever, with remissions well marked. This is accompanied by great weakness, the patient exhibiting drowsiness and sleeping the greater portion of the time. The skin has a peculiar "yellow" tint, and sometimes there is a profuse diarrhea with abscesses in different parts of the body, particularly about the joints. The breath has a characteristic sweetish odor; the face is pale and usually wears a drawn, anxious look; the pulse is variable and often thread-like, with great waste and rapid prostration of the body. These symptoms are generally preceded by a rigor or chill. There are cases, however, that have been unaccompanied by a rigor. Those are marked with great prostration and a low fever of an intermittent character. Generally after a time the skin assumes the yellow tint, and the peculiar odor of the breath may be noticed, but is sometimes absent in this form. The patient continues quiet, and his wound appears to be clean and suppurating healthily. In each instance, however, the secondary stage of the disease is marked by abscesses on various parts of the body, particularly at the joints. Septicæmia is first developed by fever—sometimes a low fever, but mostly a high one, with irregular remissions. It usually begins with a rigor or chill, and is accompanied by a weakened condition of the patient, who is often delirious and sometimes suffers from profuse diarrhœa.
