A Grateful Husband.

Toronto, 28th March, 1879.

Mr. Wintercorbyn,—Dear Sir, I wish to tender you my heartfelt thanks for the benefit my wife has derived from the use of your Hair Restorer. Some few years since she nearly lost all her hair, and what little remained turned grey. We tried every remedy in the market, some of them claiming to be wonderful discoveries, and all to no purpose. Having seen an advertisement of your discovery, we availed ourselves of it as a last resource. I am now happy to state that it not only restored the hair to its natural color, but brought in new hair where the old had fallen and my wife has to-day as good a head of hair as any lady in our city.

MY CHILDHOOD'S HOME

The sweet birds sing and the roses bloom
In cheerful round the spot
Where the peaceful shades of the heather halls
Fall dim on my mother's cot.
The windows are low, and the thatch is low,
And the stone walls old, and gray
Oh! I see it—I love it, where'er I go
That old home far away.

I can see my mother before me now,
Asleep in that old arm chair,
With the sunshine tinging her wrinkled brow
That was once so smooth and fair;
Her crimpled border, as white as the snow
And her dark brown hair turned gray;
Oh! I see it—I love it, where'er I go
That old home far away.

There's the brown cow on its homeward path
As it comes I quiet along,
And the little maid, with pail in her hand,
Is singing that dear old song
And the frolicsome lambs in that old barnyard
Are gathering round to play.
Oh! I see it—I love it, where'er I go
That old home far away.

The little clock ticks on the kitchen wall,
To tell us the passing hours,
And the woodbine climbing around the cot,
With its sweetly scented flowers
And the old straw chair, so cozy and low,
Where mother sat knitting each day
Oh! I see it—I love it, where'er I go
That old home far away.

Not all the pleasures that this world can give,
Or the riches of the sea,
Or the rank and wealth of earth's proud lords,
Can ever estrange from me
The joys of that cot and dear mother's head,
With its humble floor of clay.
Oh! I see it—I love it, where'er I go
That old home far away.

But alas! she is gone where all must go,
For we all shall pass away.
Yes, even the cot that I loved so well,
Is crumbling to decay.
For this earth is only a resting place
Its joys are ours for a day,
All the pleasures of life now seem to me
That old home far away.

GREENWOOD CEMETERY.

New York's Beautiful City of the Dead—Sketch by a Former Canadian for the "Whig."

Among the places that interest visitors most is Greenwood Cemetery, the beautiful city of the dead; and there is no other place in which New Yorkers and Brooklynites take more pride in showing their friends. There is probably not a person in either city but has, at some period of his life, seen it; and few but have ties of affection that attract them thither other than that of mere curiosity. Strangers are astonished at the magnitude and lavish display which characterizes it, as well as being impressed by its solemn grandeur and sublimity. And I doubt if there is another cemetery in the world where so much money and labour is expended to adorn and beautify. Here can be seen the most exquisite workmanship of the sculptor's art, from the dimpled babe and its marble pillow, so true to nature, that you are inclined to be silent lest you awake the little sleeper, to the lofty monument with the figure of hope perched upon its apex. But all this array of marble would soon become monotonous to the eye were it not relieved by the myriads of flowers of every variety, that are planted and cared for by living hands. In going through the grounds ten thousand little slabs are passed unnoticed. It is only the costly tombs and polished shafts that attract the stranger's gaze. In this age of mammoth hotels and big steamboats we have palatial tombs also, and the rich vie with each other in producing something more elaborate and expensive than his neighbor as a resting place for departed relatives.

ORIGIN OF THE ASSOCIATION.

The Greenwood Cemetery Association was chartered in the year 1838, but was not formally opened until four years later. It contains 450 acres; it has 184 miles of carriage avenues, and 17½ miles of paths. The cemetery is thoroughly drained by subterranean sewer pipes, and is supplied by water for drinking and irrigation purposes from the Brooklyn water works. It has eight lakes of varying dimensions, in four of which there are fountains. The water flows into the reservoir through an eight-inch pipe, forming a very beautiful fountain as it falls. Single graves cost $25, and plots range from $500 to $1,000, according to location. No profit accrues to the benefit of the Association, but the surplus is put in a sinking fund, to be used for the purpose of keeping the cemetery in repair after it shall be filled. There is now over $1,000,000 in the fund. There is an excellent carriage service for the accommodation of lot owners and visitors which convey passengers over the avenues and point out the principal places of interest. Guides are also in attendance to point out lots and give other information. The interments average fifteen a day, and there are now something over 200,000 bodies buried within its gates.

ENTRANCE TO THE CEMETERY.

There are five entrances to the cemetery, the main one of which is reached through a beautiful shady lawn ornamented with flowers. The entrance is a fine Gothic structure of Rhode Island stone, 122 feet wide, and the central point is 106 feet in height; with office on the right and visitors' room on the left of the carriageway. The recesses above the gateways are filled with finely cut groups of sculpture, representing the Saviour's Entombment and the Raising of the Widow's Son, with inscriptions underneath in gold letters: "Weep not," and "The dead shall be raised." On the reverse side is the raising of Lazarus and the resurrection of Christ, representing the Roman soldiers as stricken down with fear and amazement, and the angel holding in his hand a flaming sword. Underneath are the words: "Come forth," and "I am the Resurrection and the Life." There is a bell in the tower which every few minutes throughout the afternoon knells the arrival of another tenant to help to swell the population of this great Necropolis.

LEADING MEMORIAL STONES.

Among the 150 tombs and monuments worthy of note, I will mention a few of the most prominent ones. On Walnut avenue is the monument of John Mathews, the soda fountain man. It attracts a great deal of attention, but we think it would be more appropriate in a public park than in a cemetery. Somehow or other it impresses you with the idea that it was intended for an advertisement as well as a tomb. Upon a richly sculptured sarcophagus lies the full length recumbent statue of the deceased. On the corners of each of the four pillars, cut in marble, are correct portrait figures of different members of the family; above this rises a canopy and spire of richly decorated stone to the height of 36 feet, resting upon a tablet of sculptured marble, the lower side or ceiling of which is carved, representing Mathews at the age of 21 years leaving England for America. On a tablet under the canopy is a veiled female figure seated in a richly carved chair, typifying grief; surmounting the angles of the tablet are four grotesque gargoyles, with open mouths, through which the rain water falling upon roof is discharged. The monument designed and executed at a cost of $5,000.

On Locust hill stands the monumental bust of Horace Greeley, erected by the printers and other friends. The likeness is very perfect. On the eastern face of the pedestal is a bas relief representing the youthful Greeley, composing stick in hand at his case. On the north panel is a rude plow, and on the opposite side is a pen and scroll, both emblems cut in relief from the granite.

On Chapel hill is the tomb of Steinway, the piano manufacturer, or Steinwog, as his name originally was, in Germany, but not euphonious in America, and so he had it lawfully changed to Steinway. It is a massive structure of cut and uncut granite, and contains 128 catacombs. It is said to be the largest private tomb in the world, and cost $100,000.

Near here is the beautiful polished Scotch granite tomb, of unique design, of Samuel Morse, inventor of the electric telegraph.

On Tulip Hill is the firemens monument, surmounted by the figure of a fireman holding a child in his arms. The whole is exceedingly appropriate in design, as everything connected with the fire department is illustrated, either on the monument or gate. It was erected by the old Volunteer Fire Department of New York city.

A beautiful statuary monument, erected by Harry Howard, ex-chief engineer of the New York Fire Department, in memory of his foster mother, showing her as adopting him when saved from a burning building, is also on Tulip Hill.

In Crescent Dell, and facing a beautiful little lake, is the magnificent tomb of Mr. Niblo, formerly owner of Niblo's Garden. The tomb is of white marble, set in a hill, with the figures of two large lions cut from marble, guarding, as it were, the entrance. In the vestibule of the tomb is the figure of an infant on a marble pillar. The grounds in front display a succession of choice flowers all through the flowering season. It cost nearly $40,000.

THE OLD MAID'S PLOT.

On Southwood Avenue is a plot known as the "Old Maid's Plot," where five sisters named Kairns are interred whose ages ranged from 100 to 117 years. In front of the plot are five marble posts, on which, during their life, hung five lamps, representing the five virgins, but whenever a death occurred among them a lamp was removed. On the middle post are the words: "Anointed with Eden's oil;" while on the plain slab at the head of the graves is an inscription, the meaning of which I am unable to understand, but will give it to the reader as it appears on the stone. "Is there nothing for you to do, all you that pass on earth, Jesus Christ; the Cross is mercy's paradise in the Church of Christ an earth, Shepherd of the Sheep, He is watching."

Not far from the "Old Maid's Plot," on the gate of an iron fence which surrounds a well filled plot, are the words: "A lodge for a night on the way to the New Jerusalem."

On Alpine hill is the oriental tomb of C. K. Garrison, formerly Mayor of San Francisco, and now President of a line of steamers running between New York and the Pacific. It is a very beautiful and elaborate piece of work, and was put up at a cost of over $30,000.

In the circular plot of Edward Cummings, on Sassafras Avenue, is a massive granite monument fifty two feet high, the largest of its kind in the cemetery.

On Cypress Avenue is the circular lot and marble temple of A. S. Scribner, brother of the New York publisher. It is a superior piece of Italian sculpture, representing the figure of hope, under a canopy of marble, supported by eight pillars; an octagonal base supports the figure, and on its sides, in alabaster marble, are bas reliefs illustrative of the life of Christ from his birth to the ascension. It cost over $50,000.

On Virtu Avenue is the statue of Capt. John Correja. It is an interesting piece of statuary and is more generally known as the "Sea Captain's." It was erected about fifteen years before he died, and at the time was considered an excellent likeness. He holds in his hand is a sextant, taking an observation, the same which he used while in active service.

One of the plots most sought after is that of Charlotte Canda, the French girl, on Cherry Hill, who lost her life on the evening of Feb. 3rd, 1845, by being thrown from her carriage while returning from a party, the day being the 17th anniversary of her birth. The monument is of marble and the workmanship of the most exquisite and delicate nature. It cost $25,000, the amount she was soon to come into possession of from her father.

MONEY VS. RELIGIOUS SCRUPLES.

On the border of what is known as the new ground is a beautiful monument erected to the memory of Miss Danser, the daughter of a well-known New York sporting man. She was very religious by inclined and bequeathed over $300,000 to religious societies. There was some discussion as to whether it would be proper to receive money acquired in so illegitimate a way, but cupidity outweighed their scruples and they took it. She also willed $60,000 to the young gentleman to whom she was engaged to marry. Her plot and monument cost $20,000.

On Rattle Hill, the highest point in the vicinity, is the soldier's monument, a beautiful granite shaft, erected by the city of New York in memory of the soldiers who died in the late war. At the base of the monument are four life-sized bronze figures, representing the four branches of the army, cast from cannon captured from the rebels.

The pilot's monument, erected by the pilots of New York to the memory of Thomas Freeborn, who lost his life while in discharge of his duty on the New Jersey coast in 1846, is surrounded with emblematic designs of his nautical occupation, and surmounted with the figure of Hope.

"HERALD" STATUARY GROUP.

The statuary group in the lot of Jas. Gordon Bennett, founder of the New York Herald, is probably the finest representation of the sculptor's art to be found in the cemetery. The work was executed in Italy of the best Carrara marble, representing a life-sized female figure kneeling on a cushion in the attitude of prayer, commending her child, which is held in suspense by an angelic figure, to the Almighty. The lace work of the shawl, which is thrown about the shoulders of the figure, is brought out with wonderful exactness, as is also the lustre and folds of the dress. The figures of the angel and child were cut from one piece of marble.

I will close by mentioning the monument erected to the memory of those who perished in the burning of the Brooklyn Theatre, by the City of Brooklyn. It will be remembered that the fire broke out on the evening of December 5, 1876, during the performance of the drama entitled the "Two Orphans."

A Sad Death.

Mr. Laycock, M.P., has just died, only a fortnight after his father, who left him an income of about £40,000 per annum. He had been to attend his father's funeral
