After reading the sporting columns in your issue of Thursday I have felt it my duty to write you more fully on the facts of the case more clearly. I know the champion has the right to make the water, on which the race for the Championship is to be rowed as long as he names the course in the harbour or river to which it belongs, but when he is willing to go any distance from the water to the sea, it is his duty to name the course.

It is likely to be any organization to forward grain over the new route. It will be likely to affect the grain trade in the West. It will be likely to affect the grain trade in the West. It will be likely to affect the grain trade in the West.
