ed Tuesday, and was kept up to a very late hour. Mr. Fraser concluded his speech, which had been broken off by indispostion the day before, and the latter portion of it was just as vigorous and scathing as the former. He began by quotng and commenting on the speeches deivered by various members of the Opposition at the time when the increase was made in the indemnity, including Mesers. Cameron, Meredith, Scott, Creighton, Boulter, Macdongall, Lauder, and Broder, all of whom expressed in the most emphatic way, their approval of what was then done. He proceeded to point out how the two amendments were FENWICK ramed for the express purpose of foreing a vote in a certain way, and then passed on to the relief from the prevailing depression afforded by the judicious distribation of the surplus during the past five years. He discussed at some length the charge against Ministers for interfering in the Dominion elections, showing that it was mover expected that Ministers of the Crown should devote more time to Departmental duties than was necessary to the efficient discharge of them, and proving by actual quotation from Mr. Blake's much-quoted speech that he actually and pointedly reserved to himself as a citizen of Canada the right to take part for or appeared to him proper. Mr. Scott coutinued the debate on behalf of the Opposition, going chiefly inte the question of the extent to which the Opposition had in previous sessions moved I fenced and manured they also contain to cut down the estimated expenditure. He also endeavored to prove by a legal argument that the general election ought to be held before the third of February the day on which all the write were recept the writ for Algema.
