SATURDAY EV'NG, FEB'Y 8, 1879. HOPE FAITH AND LOVE.

There are three lessons I would write Three words as with a burning pen, In tracings of eternal light, Upon the hearts of men.

Have Hope, Though clouds environ now, And gladness hides her face in scorn. But thou the shadow from thy brow — No night but hath its morn.

Have Faith. Where'er thy bark is driven-The calm s disport, the tempest's mirth-Know this-God rates the hosts of Heaven. The inhabitants of earth. Have Love. Not love alone for one,

But man as man thy brother call, And scatter like the circling sun Thy charities on all. Thus grave these lessons on thy soul-

Hope. Faith, and Love and thou shalt find Strength when life's surges rudest roll, Light when thou else were blind.

But his position must by this time be al-Papa M. guarded this tressure as the most tired of saying what was the veriest apple of his eye, and refused suitors by the dozen, and that, too, without even ed, because it was so true, nobody paid consulting his little daughter. There is time enough to think about marrying, he drunkenness was the vice that filled the said, 'when the right man appears, and I Jail of England, that if they could make think it suitable. Well, then,' etc., etc. England sober they could shut up nine-But the right man had come for his tenths of her prisons. It was not only 'obedient' little daughter-obedient, those particular cases to which he had excepting in affairs of the heart, which of been directing their attention, but other course, she understood better than papa cases; and, indeed, a large number of > had found daily opportunity to exchange a few words with his beloved. But now every thing was changed Herr M. had retired from business, and there were no longer opportunities of either meeting or talking with one anwas after this fashion

The same thing happened at the barber witnesses estitled.' shop. The attentive apprentice polished the old stove-pipe until it shone like glass. The little attention pleased Papa M. so greatly that the officious young man was no loser, but received each time a bit of trink yeld.

Poot, unsuspicious old man! Had you but seen the treacherous manipulations of the young bair-dresser, you would, doubtless, have given him something different than five pennies for drink money; for, from the lining of your hat, unknown to you, he has taken a dainty little note. which quietly, disappeared in a side pocket. And this note your "obedient," daughter Emma had, before you left home, quickly smuggled beneath the lining of your hat. It is destined for the young engineer. And under this same hat-lining you shall bring back to the little daughter a love letter from the devoted engineer-unconscious postilion

And the barbaric currespondence in Papa M.'s old stove-pipe lasted uninterruptedly for four months. Last Easter-tide this hat celebrated its risit to the barber, he goes to the hat-'Is this hat too large!' asked the hat-

'Why, then, do you put a peice of paper under the lining? 'Paper! paper! How did that get there! Let me see it.

Well for Papa M that he had strong nerves, else he might have swooned, as case. Regular size only 75c. he drew forth a genuine love letter, written according to the most approved style, and addressed to Herr Edward S. Engineer. He could not believe of The Bottling Department will be a his eyes, but there it was in black and I, too, will throw myself at his feet and confess our love. Benides, Edward, our correspondence by means of the hat cannot last much los ger. The old hat is already so much worm by constant brushing that I fear he will soon think it useds repairing, or he will buy a new one, which may hardly serve our end as well as this,' etc.

When the old hat had been rejuvenated, Herr M. repaired just the same the barbers. Fritz, the apprentice, turned pale when he saw the shining beaver; in vain he looked for the little note there was not a trace of it. Nevertheless, he concealed the engineer's billet done as nearl under the lining. Here M. had seen the whole performance in the mirror, while the barber was shaving him, but he pretended not to notice it, and gave the intriguing Fritz his five connice, just as usual. On his way home he perused the document. One passage pleased him very much:

'I assure you, dear Emma, that I do not desire a single penny from your father. It is for you alone I care; and thank God, my business places me in a situation, sto. 'Hom, hom, muttered Papa M. 'After all, he seems to be an honorable man, and thinks more of my daughter than of my money. Well, we will put the young people to the test, meanwhile we will still pay postman.

This he did as regularly as before. Of course it was his privilege to read the contents of the respective letters before contents of the respective letters before they were delivered, and thereby he became finally convinced that the lovers would never be separated, that they seemed made for one another and that proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine seemed made for one another and that they would make their old papa's last days happy by their affection and devo-

And so the little story has a happy ending; at least it seems so, for the relatives and friends on either side received soon after betrothal cards signed Emma M. and Edward S.

TEMPERANCE.

The Edinburgh Laily Review states that at a meeting of the Haddington Presbytery, Dr Whitelaw, in calling the attention of his colleagues to the condition of the virtuous poor of Scotland, read a letter he had received from Mr. Bright on the subject. In the letter Mr. Bright says: "The great whiskey quantion is one which your friends may consider with some advantage. If all the ministers of the Scotch Churches were to banish whiskey from their houses, and the consumption of it from the customs or social habits, they would do much to discredit and to withdraw one fertile source of poverty and suffering in Scotland. Many of what you term 'virtuous poor' suffer much from the evil of whiskey in connection with members of their families." In Connecticut, under the prohibition of 1854, crime diminished 75 per cent., on the restoration of the license system crime again increased 50 per cent. 'Uu der its present optiyn law in the City of New London, whereathe inhabitants have decided against all liquor, the arrests for drunkenness have suddenly diminished from 35 in a single night to 5, and the gambling houses are said by a reporter, who is no friend to total abstainance, to be doing a loosing business." Among scientific men there are few better authorities in England than Protessor Lyon Playfair. This is his evidence in regard to the nourishment of beer :- 'One hundred parts of ordinary beer or porter contains 91 parts of solid matter; and, of this, only six-tenth consists of flesh-forming matter ; in other words, it takes 1,600 parts of ordinary beer or porter to obtain one part of nourishing matter. To drink beer or porter to nourish us, is tantamount to awallowing a sack of chaff for the sake of obtaining a grain of wheat.

The Journal of Chemistry, a strictly scientific journal, in an article on "The Preservation of the Voice," after commenting on the care necessary in matters beverages should not on any consideration be indulged in by vocal artists." One of the most respected and best known judges in Great Britain at the cent charge to the grand jury at Briatol, England, he said : "Persons sitting in truism in the world, and what he suppos-

-and in the form of a young engineer, cases which the judge and jury had to who was as wide-awake as Herr M., and, to deal with, began, or ended, or were having business connections with him connected with the vice of drunkenness."

Sir Wiltrid Lawson, M.P.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson, in a letter to the Rev. Thomas Gales, Secretary of the Dominian Alliance, says : 'I shall look with the greatest interest for reports of the adoption and working of your new law (the Canada Temperance Act). I am sure that the Canadian Temperance reformers, who have the matter in charge, will feel that not only the welfare of your own country, but also the rapid progress of temperance reform in many other countries, depends to a very large degree on the success of this Canadian experiment. You wil! have many enemies doing their best-or worst-to make the thing a failure, and also ready to fasten on any fact which may be made to make it appear to be a failure. But work and patience will make all right." BOSCHEE'S GERMAN SYRUP can now be purchased right at home, it is the most successful preparation ever inaixth year's jubilee. 'Come, faithful old troduced to our people. It works like a friend,' said Herr M., 'to-day is your charm in all cases of consumption, pneubirthday; you shall have a fresh iron- monia, hemorrhages, asthma, severe cou ha, croup and all other throat and No sooner said than done. No person has ever used this medicine without getting immediate relief, yet there are a great many poor, suffering, skeptical persons going about our streets with a suspicious cough, and the voice of consumption coming from their lungs, that will not try it.
