CATARRH
NEVER-FAILING RELIEF
AFFORDED BY
SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE.
IT is a fact that can be substantiated by the most respectable testimonials ever offered, in favor of any proprietary medicine, that the RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH does in every case afford instant and permanent relief. No matter of how long standing, or how severe the disease, the first dose gives such evidence of its value in the treatment of Catarrhal affections that confidence is at once felt in its ability to do all that is claimed for it. The testimony of physicians, druggists, and patients is unanimous on this point, and the accumulating evidence is in point of respectability superior to any ever before obtained in favor of a popular remedy. The proprietors, therefore, may justly feel proud of the position this remedy has attained, and believe it worthy of its reputation.

10 YEARS A SUFFERER.
From Hon. Theo. P. Bogert, Bristol, R.I.
MESSRS. WEEKS & POTTER: Gentlemen,—Feeling thoroughly convinced of the efficacy of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH, I am induced to drop you a line to say that although I have been skeptical of all the nostrums advertised as "radical cures," I have never found anything that promises such relief and ultimate cure as Sanford's. I have been afflicted with this dreadful disease for more than ten years, and not until recently could I be induced to try anywere with any until I read the letter of Mr. HENRY WELLS, and can truthfully say that after using five or six bottles I am thoroughly convinced of its curative properties. Hoping that others similarly afflicted like myself will be induced to make the trial, I am, Gentlemen, very truly, etc.
THEO. P. BOGERT.
BRISTOL, R. I., July 24, 1877.

CURLERS' SONG.

COMPOSED (IMPROMPTU) AND SUNG BY CAPTAIN SOMERVILLE, AT THE DINNER GIVEN TO THE OTTAWA CURLERS' TEAM, IN BELLEVILLE, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 4TH.

Some curlers keen frae Ottawa,
Cam' up tae try their hans
Wi' Belleville chaps, as guid, I trou,
As any in the laun.
The day was mild, the ice was keen
The play began at nine,
When Tommy drew one tae the tee,
Says Charley that's o'er fine.

CHORUS.

Don't you, don't you, don't you, don't you
Really think it was—
O tell me ony curler true
Don't ye really think it was?

The play was graun', inwicks were ta'en
An' some played chap and lie,
While some when naething else would dae
The winner chipped forbye.
Fine guards were laid, in nick o' time
Tae save the winnin' stanes,
Till Geordie in his riding shots
Knocked a' tae smithereens.

Don't you, don't you, don't you, don't you
Really think it was—
O tell me ony curler truce
Don't you really think it was?

The other half of the song was promised when the match was completed.

ACCIDENTALLY INNOCENT.

No lawyer likes going into court with a thoroughly bad case, yet how can he help it sometimes?

I should have more patience with the question, 'Do you ever think it right to defend a man whom you believe to be guilty?' were it less frequently put by people who spend six days of the week seeking to get the upper hand of their neighbors, and the seventh trying to circumvent their Maker. To the honest enquirer, I commend the answer Dr. Johnson once gave to Boswell, 'Sir, the lawyer is not the Judge.'

Was it my place when George Gilbert's little care-worn wife came with tears glistening in her eyes, to beseech me to do what I could for her imprisoned husband, virtually to turn my back and leave her tired, troubled heart, to break or not as it might. I was neither a priest nor a Levite to find a ready excuse for passing by on the other side. Yet what could I do? George Gilbert had been sent on a collecting tour and had gambled away money received for his employers. It was a plain case of embezzlement, and the penalty was a term of years in the State's prison.

'I am sure he never meant to be dishonest,' pleaded the loyal little woman; 'he was tempted by a crafty and designing man, but instead of running away, as others would have done, he came back and confessed his fault, offering to let his whole salary go toward making up the lost money till every cent was paid. Mr. Mangle, the head of the house, who just returned then after a year's absence, insisted that the law should take its course.'

I gave her what poor consolation I could, for lawyers, like doctors, must keep their patients' courage up at times.

'In the first place, I'll see Messrs. Mangle & Meek,' I said. 'Mr. Mangle may be brought to hear reasons after all—if he can only be made to see his interest in it.'

The pale, despondent face cheered up a little. My words seemed to have inspired a sort of undefined hope that I was far from feeling myself.

Mr. Mangle received me with stony politeness.

'Young man,' his manner said, 'don't waste time in appeals to sentiment; you won't if you'll only just look at me.'

I took the hint and at once to business, repeated Gilbert's offer, and put it as strongly as possible that more was to be gained by leniency than harshness all of which Mr. Mangle listened to with a conscientious scowl.

'I cannot be a party to compounding a felony,' he answered with a solemn intonation.

'Nor have I asked you,' I replied, not a little nettled. 'I have merely mentioned a plan of paying back your own, leaving it to your generosity to press or not to press this prosecution.'

'Oh, it's all the same,' was the contemptuous rejoinder—'anybody but a lawyer, with his head full of quirks and quiblets, could see that. Besides, there is something rather cool in the proposal to retain your friend in our employ under pretence of working out the money he has stolen with the opportunity of filching twice as much in the meantime.'

I felt my temper raising, and not caring to imperil my client's interest by an outright quarrel, I took a hasty leave.

Had I been in the prisoner on the the morning fixed for trial, I could hardly have ascended the court house steps with more reluctance than I did. And when I entered the court-room and found Gilbert and his wife already there and noted the hopeful look with which the latter greeted my coming my heart sickened at the thought of the bitter disappointment coming.

'The People vs. Gilbert,' called out the judge, after disposing of some formal matters.

A jury was immediately empanneled and the case opened by the District Attorney.

Mr Meek was the first witness. The nervous, hesitating manner in which he gave his evidence would have greatly damaged its effect had it not evidently arisen from a disposition to do the prisoner as little hurt as possible. But no softening could break the terrible force of facts he was compelled to relate.

In his partner's absence he had employed George Gilbert as a clerk; had found him competent and trustworthy; had sent him on a trip to make collections; after receiving a considerable sum, he was induced by a respectable looking gentleman, with whom he had casually fallen in, to join a social game of cards; at first they played for amusement, then for money, and after losing all his own, in hope of retrieving his loss, with the fatal infatuation of that dreadful vice whose end is swift destruction, he had hazarded and lost the last dollar of money he had in trust for his employers.

Mr. Meek's voice faltered as he closed his narrative. He was to volunteer something about the prisoner's good character when a disapproving glance from Mr. Mangle brought him to a halt.

Just then the prisoner chanced to turn his head, and catch a glimpse of the senior partner, who had just entered and was standing among the crowd, he started quickly, then whispered hurridly in my ear.

'Turn aside your face,' I whispered back. And the case for the prosecution being closed.

'Have you any witnesses for the defence?' inquired the judge.

'I will call Hezekiah Mangle,' I replied.'

A buzz of surprise greeted the announcement, in the midst of which Mr. Mangle stepped forward and was sworn.

'You have been absent for the past year, Mr. Mangle?' I began.

'I have.'

'Travelling in different parts?'

'Yes, sir.'

'The prisoner was employed by your partner in your absence, and was arrested about the time of your return?'

'Such was the case.'

'Have you ever seen him?'

'Not to my knowledge.'

'Or met him in your travels?'

'If he will turn his head this way I can tell better.'

At my bidding Gilbert turned and faced the witness.

The effect was electrical. Mr. Mangle turned red and pale by turns.

'One other question, Mr. Mangle,' I resumed, 'Do you recognize in the prisoner a young man from whom you won a thousand dollars at 'poker' while on your travels?' and I named the time and place at which the prisoner had met with the misfortune.

The man of iron nerve hesitated worse than his more amiable partner had done. He was halting between a point blank lie, which might entail the penalties of perjury, and the truth, which would cost him money.

Cowardice performed the office of conscience, and the truth came out. The firm's money, which George Gilbert had lost, had been won by the senior partner; and the Court instructed the jury that, as the sum in question had actually been delivered to one of the joint owners, who was bound to account to his associate, the prisoner could not be convicted.

'God bless you Mr. Parker!' faltered the happy little wife. 'I knew you would bring us out all right.'

It was evident the truthful woman's nature gave me all the credit of a result in whose achievement my share had been next to nothing.

The lesson was not lost on George Gilbert. His first false step was the last; and the richest fees I ever received was the heartfelt gratitude of his noble faithful wife.
