A LATE M. P.

The announcement of the death of R. S. Scatcherd, Esq., ex.M.P., for North Middlesex, has fallen as a sad surprise upon the hosts of friends which were won for him, not less by the straightfortraitors within! Unwise Protestants, wardness of his public career than by his your religion is called in question on many genial good qualities. On the death of his brother in 1874 Mr. Scatcherd was elected for North Middlesex. with the utmost easy, as his successor By one of those narrow Tory majorities, by which so many seats were snatched from the napping Reformers last Septemto support this very system that is edu ber, Mr. Scatcherd missed re-election, of telief-in the geology and cosmogomy There was nothing whatever in Mr. Coughlin, his successful opponent, to of the present age as taught by Lyell, commend him to the preference of the electors. Mr. Scatcherd was in every respect the superior candidate-politics seide altogether-there being in fact no comparison whatever between him and his successful rival. Mr. Scatcherd's defeat can only be ascribed to that strange wave of selfish political insanity which swept the country at the last election Had he lived to fight the battle over groan to bear. In view then of all the again the repentant public sentiment of sinful practices contingent upon a belief him to Parliament with a much larger in the doctrines of modern scientists, we children, were found in a starving conmajority than ever. The feeling in dare to come boldly to the front and denounce science as it so righteously de-Strathroy, his own town, and all through Middlesex, where he is best known, is one of intense sorrow at his sudden departure. His death will create a vacancy in the Liberal ranks not easily filled, and will prove a serious loss not merely to his own party but to the community at large in which he was universally respected and admired.

WELLINGTON STREET, next to Waldron' Sale of Reserved Seats commences at Woods Dry Goods Store where I will, from time to time, hold SALES of Real Estate, Household Furniture, Carriages, Pianes, Literature, General Merchandise and works of Art. As in the past, I shall give my personal attention to all sales entrusted to my manage ment, and with a reputation for obtaining the most satisfactory prices, as well as for prompt returns of cash and account of sales, I will ondeavour to merit a share of the patronage of the people of Kingston by making my transactions satisfactory to all. Appraisals and Valuations appecialty. Merchants with an overstock will do well to send some of it to my Auction Rooms for disposal. Housekeepers baying a surplus stock of furuiture will find it to their advantage to send it to me for sale, My motto has ever been prompt settlement and inmediate and satisfactory returns in detail after sales. Sales at private residences is a very important branch of my business, in which for the past fourteen years I have been ex-tensively favoured and eminently saccessful. Soliciting the patronage of those who intend selling their furniture this Spring, I would most respectfully say, give me an early in-timation, as choice of day is most important. for already some engagements are made. To the law profession and agents of Loan and Building Society, I would courteously state that I have much experience in Chancery and Mortgage Sales. Sheriff's Sales, Landlord's Sales and Bailiff's Sales relicited. Farm Sales, Cattle and Horses Sales in the city as we las on owner's premises will have my best atten-Cartoons of Galstone, from "Mr. tion.
