She goes to the piano and sings his favourite songs, the last the German one.

'Ach wie ist möglich
Dass ich dich lass'en kann.'

'How can I leave thee.
How can I bear to part,
That thou hast all my heart.
Oh, love, believe!'

He repeats it over as they exchange farewells.

Smiling up at him through her tears 'God be with you,' she says, 'that is my best good bye.'

CHAPTER V.

The days go by and form themselves into weeks, another weeks and yet another, and still Wilford finds himself an unwilling resident of the (also) city. It is hot, intolerably hot, and down the ugly rumors of an unwelcome visitant, the Yellow Fever. Wilford is a Southerner by birth, but long residence in the north has unacclimated him, still he has no fears to-morrow will find him on his homeward way. He is smoking in the office of the St. Charles one afternoon, when a friend passes him, satchel in hand.

'You here still, Schuyler? Better get away; there are two new cases of fever on Carondelet street, and you are the kind it falls heavy upon.'

'Thanks,' returns Wilford, 'I leave town to-morrow.'

In the evening a dreadful headache comes upon him and a sudden chill. 'I have taken cold,' he says to himself as he goes to bed. 'Ah, well, to-morrow shall be on my way toward home, and Tainsite.'

To-morrow exhaust ive proceedings, consisting of a physician and some colored men, who at an early stage have no fear of the disease, carry Wilford Schuyler, raving with delirium of fever, down the hotel halls, and to the fever hospital. The hall-mate unanimously decided on is carried out, but a woman comes out from a door clad in a sister's dress. The doctor looks at her. 'Where are you going?' he asked.

'Where you take him,' she says, motioning to their burden.

'Do you know it is almost certain death?' he asked again.

'I know my duty,' she says, touching her dark robe significantly.

The physician says no more, and she takes her station beside Schuyler's bed and watches over him like a mother; gives him with careful hand his quinine, creosote and brandy, gives him too the ice water for which he calls unceasingly. Very near he goes to the dark door-way, and the doctor shakes his head ominously, but that brave sister that has tended him all through the terrible days of delirium with a silent prayer that God will spare him to the girl whose name is so often upon his lips. At last he sinks into a heavy slumber, from which he will either drift into a silent land or waken to life again. He wakens and comes back from the verge of the grave to life again, but the doctor does not understand it, when she falls upon her knees in thankfulness, as he tells her that her care and attention have done what no medicine could do and saved his life. Many an instance of the sister's unselfish devotion he has seen—none that lies apparently so near her heart as that woman's. A 'relative' she cannot be, for the face—that the sister's cap hides—is that of an Irish peasant, while the face that lies upon the pillow is thoroughly aristocratic. Suddenly it has come through the valley of shadows and still bears a ghastly yellowish tinge.

Wilford grows well again rapidly, but can give the doctor no explanation of his nurse's devotion, until at last he questions her about it. 'It is so unusual—your kindness—I cannot understand it. The doctor tells me it is you I owe my life.'

She stands silent for a moment, then begins: 'I have but repaid a debt, for long ago you saved me—body and soul; you have forgotten me. I could never forget you. Years ago you gave forty dollars to a poor emigrant woman who had lost her husband at sea—and gave what was better to her than gold—kind, encouraging words that lent hope to her sinking heart. I was that woman. I saw your well remembered name upon the hotel register, heard from the clerk that you were confined with the fever, left my position as seamstress in the hotel, put on a sister's dress, as all that I knew, I could go anywhere, and endeavored to help take care of you. I did what I could to return your kindness.'

He is weak, childishly weak still, and tears rise in his eyes as he thanks her in earnest terms. He has been cured, and after fumigation, which he decides is almost as bad as the fever, he leaves for the north.

At home again he clasps in his arms the girl who is his dearest earthly treasure, and tells the story of Honora McCarthy. Antoinette Remond's blue eyes are swimming in tears as she says, 'Ah, Wilford, it was not I, but you, who 'Cast your bread upon the waters' that day so long ago, thank God, it returned to you after many days.'

A month ago a steamer sailed for Europe and carried among it passengers Wilford Schuyler, bride and bridegroom, and the maid was their true and honored friend as well. Honora McCarthy.—Albany Sunday Press.

ELECTRICITY.

Thomas' Eclectric Oil.

Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold.—Pain cannot stay where it is used!

It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures ordinary sore throat. One bottle has cured bronchitis. Fifty cents worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma and croup. Fifty cents worth has cured cases in the back, and the same quantity has, both of eight years standing. It cures swelled neck, tumors, rheumatism, neuralgia, congestion of the muscles, stiff joints, spinal difficulties and pain and soreness in any part, no matter where it may be, nor from what cause it may arise, it always does you good. Twenty-five cents worth has cured hard colds, and all kinds of throat difficulty. One tea-spoonful cures colic in five minutes. It will cure any case of piles that it is possible to cure. Six or eight applications is warranted to cure any case of contracted nipples or inflamed breasts. For bruises, if applied often and bound on, there is not the slightest discoloration of the skin. It stops the pain of a burn as soon as applied. Cures frosted feet, hands, ears, and cures sore wounds of every description in man or beast.

Ensure on the genuine.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, see that the signature of E. M. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the words of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and take no others. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price 25c. Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

A CARD.

To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a recipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the Rev. Joseph T. Inman, Station D, Bible House, New York City.

They are the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma and all throat troubles, and no other remedy has the least chance with you if any complaint of the throat or lungs exist. If taken in time consumption will soon be cured. Sold by all druggists and country dealers at 25 cents per box.

Tan Horse.—Of the great number of animals under the control of man, the horse is unquestionably the most serviceable, but it is not strange that so many who own horses, and who are dependent on their labor for a living should neglect to give to them that care and attention which their own interest no less than the safety and comfort of the horse demands. The best remedy for horses is Dunham's Condition Powders and Dunham's Heave Cure. Most of this class can be so, no doubt, it is safe and easily taken. Remember the name and see that the signature of Hord & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.
