There are three divisions in the programme, in the first of which several of leading characters are introduced, prominent among 'Grimaldi' (G. H. Adama), the clown, and 'Pantaloon' (C. F. Fox), whose feats, gymnastic and otherwise, are truly remarkable, and who proved the life and soul of the play, the individuals in whom is the best clown we have ever seen, have ing great facial powers, a very mischie yous disposition, lithe, active, and a con stant sensation. 'Pantaleon' is his faith ful alley, and almost his equal, though not so versatile. The Belleville Ontario says of it 'As was to be expected, the great interest in the piece centres in Mr. Rows as Wilkins Micawber, Esq., the man who, in short, is always waiting for something to turn up. From the commencement to the close of the piece the audience were enraptured to such a degree as has seldom been observed at any performance given here, the play being of such a nature as to please everybody. 'Micawber,' as played by Mr. Rowe, is a true picture of that worthy individual, as portrayed by the novelist, and after seeing Mr. R. in the character, those who have read the novel have been led to think much more of it than ever. THE SOLE OBJECTION REMOVED -The irregular habits of business and working men, as shown by their neglect of the necessary functions of the body, in their feverish haste to get through with what they have in hand, are the fertile source of a pestilent brood of evils. Chronic constipation, piles, dyspepsia, with a long train of aches and diseases extending through all the other organs, are the natural consequences. The only prevention of these ills is the constant use of small doses of Caster Oil. The sole ob-
