Fathers Corbett, O'Reilly, Spratt, Twohey and Walsh were also present. The pupils examined last evening were those composing the first section of the first class. This is the senior class of the school, and consists of fifteen young lade, ranging from twelve to fitteen years of age. Under the carefu training of the Brothers thay have sur passed their years in learning, and we were surprised to see that in problems that often puzzle older heads they were quite at home, rattling off the anawers with great expertness. The class presented a very favorable appearance upon the platform, they being arranged according to size, the largest in the middle. The programme for the evening was Physical Geography, (the tides being the subject taken up), History, (Ancient and Modern Greece), Book-keeping, the copy books being exhibited. In book keeping they were found to be quite expert, and we may in future expect much from the lads in the way of competent accoun tants. There was also Rhetoric, Punctuation, Algebra Copies, (the work done being in Radical's), and Geometry. In this latter study the boys appeared to be and explicit. The use of Globes was also given. Last evening the examinations of the oupils of the Christian Bruthers' Schoo was concluded. As on all the preceding evenings there was a large attendance of the parents of the children, and others well versed, and their answers were clear dience last evening. The school room was beautifully decorated with their work that speaks for itself. At present there are 110 pupils engaged in drawing and painting. The little lads of the school, those who were under twelve, too, so the captain (A. Jennings) came to terms of peace. The valedictory address was given by Thomas Crowlay, of Portsmouth. It was excellently rendered. The purport of it was as follows: "I have been deputed by my school associates to thank you for your faithful attendance here since the beginning of our examinations, for the marked attention which you have so kindly given us, and for the lively interest which you have clearly manifested in the whole proceedings. No doubt many among you have put yourselves to no little inconvenience, in order to witness our feeble efforts to display some little knowledge in the various branches in which we have been examined. Your presence here in such numbers proves conclusive ly that our education is to you a matter of no little importance. Though we have felt shame at our many blunders, yet we have been greatly cheered and encouraged by the pleasant smiles and other kind ly marks of approbation with which you have greeted us, whenever our boyish request Mr. Speers gave The wreck of the attempts have been successful. In striving to advance ourselves intellectually, we hope we shall not forget to improve ourselves morally and socially, and thus, by fulfilling our duties to God, to our neighbor, and to ourselves, we may hope to obtain, in the end, the reward promised to the good and faithful servant. Now, while thanking you again for the pleasure you have afforded us by your presence here whole entertainment was under the preevening after evening, I wish to remind you that our exhibition will take place in

THE WILLIAMSONS. The Inquest Business.

It will be remembered that last winter

while some boys were angling through the ice in the vicinity of Cedar Island, a box was fished up, containing the re mains of a child. The Barriefield con stable was summoned, but that functionary, after examining the corpse, decided that the deposit in the water had been made by some students, who had abandoned it after dissection, and so he concluded that the simplest way to dispose of it was to again shove it under the ice.

The Sacred Concert in the above church last evening was a great success, particularly in regard to the rendition of programme. The announcement Mrs. Keltie and Miss Barr of Hamilton and Mr. Speers, would take a prominent part in the programme attracted a good house in spite of the inclemency of the weather. In this latter respect the ladies of the Association have been fortunate. Last night's entertainmen was given chiefly because of the storm which prevailed at the former one, keeping numbers from attending, but the weather of last evening was a repetition of the same ill-luck as attended the previous venture. The concert was given the body of the church, and began at clock by a well executed solo by Mr Heath, the organist of the Church. portion of the Queen Street choir then ronderedian anthem with a precision and effect for which the choir is justly celebrated, and then the execution of the programme devolved upon Mrs. Keltie, Miss Barr, Mr. Speers, and Tandy Brothers. The latter sang one their best duets during the evening, and Mr. R. Tandy sang the 'Cujus Animam, from Rossini's Stabat Mater. The ma estic solo was given with that power clearness and expression for which has ine tenor voice is justly celebrated. When we say that the singing of the Hamilton ladies was thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed we give but a faint idea of the intense pleasure with which they were listened to by every one of the aneasy to see, is peculiarly at home in sac red nusic. The soul with which she sings her sacred selections intensifies the grace and finish with which she interprets | quantity and nauseons to the taste. In selection, "With Verdure Clad," from power, precision and expression which Liver Oil, the greatest food and medicine did full justice to that beautiful solo, in the world for the Consumptive or the audience with the subdued feeling Lame and Soda this has been entirely which is breathed throughout the sacred overcome, and it is as pleasant as sweet song, and with which the singer herself | milk was evidently penetrated. Miss Barr seems to grow in favour here with every added visit to Kingston. She has now sing repeatedly in this city, and on every occasion her delightful singing has been enjoyed with the relish of increasing appreciation. Her first solo of last evening, "Show me thy ways, O Lord," was superbly rendered. Her full rich voice never showed to better advantage, and the climax of the selection revealed on her part the possession of a power and a compass which many of the admirers of her singing had not previously given her the credit of possessing. Later in the evening she repeated by special request 'Angels ever bright and fair,' and this selection, like the former one, proved a rare treat to all. Both ladies took frequent part in the trios, quartettes, etc., lending the charm of variety as well as harmony the programme. Two of the quartettes, 'God is a spirit,' and 'The sea hath it s pearls,' were sung without accompaniment and proved to be gems of faultless harmony, shading and expression. Mr. Speers held his audience spell-bound, as he generally does when not convulsing them with side splitting mirth, by his recitation descriptive of 'The passage of the children of Israel through the Red Sea-This sacred selection was given with wonderful power, the changing emotions from the terror of alarm and despair to the exultant joy of deliverance and victory being depicted with voice and gesture true to the life. At a meeting of the operative mason and bricklayers of this city, held last evening, great dissatisfaction and regret were expressed at the persistent effort that is being made from year to year tocut down our wages.
