"STRUCK OIL."

PROPECTING IN THE OPERA HOUSE. The Williamsons deserved the large sice which greeted them in the ra House last evening, when they ppeared in the exceedingly mirthful and laughable comedy of 'Struck Oil.' It has been said that the drama is without plot, but we see sufficient foundation for character building, for which the stars of this Company are such evident adepta. The story can be easily explained. John Shofel (Mr. Williamson) is a happy Dutchman, not lazy, but disliking labor, and while enjoying the love of his affectionate but mischievous Lizzie (Miss Moore), he suddenly becomes involved in city, but it does not increase the city rouble, Deacon Skinner (Mr. Sinclair) having threatened through his lawver press for the payment of a mortgage held by him on the old Dutchman's little home n the dilemma Deacon Skinner auggest d an idea - that Stofel should go i stead of him to the war for which Skin per was drafted. The Dutchman declined tog for parchase money at first the want of funds and gage, and the deed of the Farm" (on which Shofel had had eye) caused him to accept. Then there in the parting scene, the leaving of home and loved ones, and the murch to battle Pollowing this there is a representation of military life, the dalling of the awk vard squad being made exceedingly tmusing by the blundering stupidity of the Dutchman. There is a long interval or apparent lapse of time, during which the war is ended and a comrade of th beent Datchman gave such evidence s ld to the belief that he had been killed beacon Skinner had been carried the prevailing ambition and fever he day, and having experimented upor he 'Hill Farm,' struck oil and became a nillionaire. The deed of this place hofel had hid under a brick in the old learth of his home, while Skinner thought le had stolen and destroyed it, and now n his affluence he set about ousting Ars. Shofel and her daughter, and de nolishing their home, the' Mrs. Shofe ad pledged her word to her husband ever to-leave it 'as long as one brick repained of the old hearth.' There has een a compromise effected, and the las itness to the act was about to sign his ame when Shofel turned up. The msane as the resuit of a previous accident, he sustained another burt among the boring machinery, and in being treated the cause of inganity had been discovered, and remedy being applied the Dutchman is re turned to reason just in time to produce the deed of the farm, and become the millionaire that Skinner was. The whole piece has a tendency to give prominence to Mr. and Mrs. Williamson, (Miss Moore,) whose performance was linished throughout. The Dutch accent and dress and manner were perfectly drawn, and the sengs and dances of Mrs. Williamson were warmly applanded. There are both humour and pathos, and they are placed in touching contrast. The heart is made merry one moment, and the next the af fecting scene brings tears to the eves and the sympathy of the audience is intermingled with the feined sadness of the performers. Mrs. Williamson is versa tile, is very veracious in some parts

THE RECEPTION.

There was a very large attendance yesterday afternoon in the City Council Chamber, at the first meeting of the Jeneral Committee for the reception of His Excellency the Governor-General and Her Royal Highness, the Princess Louise. All classes most loyally attested their pleasure at the coming demonstraion. The clergy of the city were represented by fully one half of their number. The Mayor was named Chairman, and Mr. M. Flanagan, the City Clerk and une honored Secretary on such occasions, was again requested to act.

The Mayor detailed all that had been done in council and committee in fl natter, and a general conversation folwould arrive from Ottawa by the regular afternoon train of the 29th, in a special of the Grand Trunk Railway. K. & P. RR. locomotive will be in readings and draw the car at once to the Market Battery by the branch line. Ad dresses will then be presented on a decorated platform within the Battery, in view of the thousands which the wide space in front of the City Hall will accommodate. The civic guests will then be escorted to their residence.

The drawing-room will be held in the City Hall upon Thursday or Friday The Committee decided up n a Citi sad and silent sorrow. I know well the gloomy sadness which tills your hearts this morning; I know well the gloom which reigns in your city, but it is not to the souls of you who are here this morning. Yet I know well that the consolation I am about to offer at the present moment will only be answered by the words "Father Leonard is dead." Yes. during the last three days repeatedly have these words found echo in every part of the city. Those who had seen him and heard him, and learned to love his memory - priests and laity -have assombled this morning to do him reverence. I assure you that the some of the words which I have spoken to you apply to your deeply afflicted souls, still in them you will find reason for consolation and also for joy. The prophet Isaiah tells us that there is a dark hour for us all, but that for those who pour forth their souls to the hungry and satisfy the afflicted there is darkness as well as for those who do not these things. But he continues to say to us, that in the RECEPTION COMMITTER. - His Worship midst of this darkness a light shall rise. the Mayor, Chairman; Ald. Drennan, and that light shall be even as the Master of Ceremonies; and the General noon day sun. How truly applicable the words this morning. Year after year the Charitable Societies of Kingston and elsewhere have had to return thanks to Father L conard for lectures delivered by him n their behalf. Very materially indeed have these lectures assisted the Someties, and the members of them have been enabled to satisfy the hunger of the poor and comfort the widow and orphan. The last time he stood where I stand now was to plead for the sacred cause of charity. I see before me this morning many who listened to his voice on that evening, but, alas! never more shall you again hear his voice from this pulpit. When he gave his last lecture he was in ill health, and nothing but the sacred cause of charity would have induced him to have spoken to you. He should have been enjoying quiet repose, but St. Vincent de Paul's Society hal no fouds, the poor had no bread, and Father Leonard. in consequence, poured forth his own soul and own strength in order that the poor might have the wherewith they might be satisfied. You are aware of the great effort required of hun on that evening, but when he spoke of the suffer ing of the martyre his heart swelled he cause he knew what it was to suffer. His voice almost failed him, but as he spuke a night of the poor came up before him and of the little ones reaching out and crying for something to satisfy their hunger and immediately his voice gained strength and he continued to the close of his able sketch of the early martyre Canacia. I need not tell you that since that time he never entered this pul pit. It became him that his last effort should be on behalf of hungry; and as his last sermon was for the poor so also was his last act in this city. Just before leaving us he assisted is a religious profession. On this occasion three young ladies consecrated their souls Almighty God and their lives to the service of the poor. At the close of the consecration Father Leonard sang the hymn of praise as I never heard him ming it before. He knew that three more lives were consecrated to the service of the poor; more ready hands to minis ter to God's little children, consequently he rejoiced. But while he poured forth paid a visit to Jones' Falls, and when his soul for the hungry how he satisfied in the vicinity of the Government dam, the afflicted soul I need not tell you the horse backed the carriage, to which Often those who came hear to listen to which is 75 feet in height.
