Toronto Telegram. Did Mr. Phipps ever complain taken in by Sir John of being We have been laboring under the impres sion that in so far as the new Dominion Cabinet is concerned it was just because Mr. Phipps was not taken in to that he took mortal offence at Sir John and bolted from the party he had so materially helped to restore to power.

Hon. Mackenzie Bowell will shortly, it is stated, be transferred from the office h now holds as Minister of Customs to the head of the Canadian War Department We are not aware that Mr. Bowell has very particularly distinguished himself as Minister of Customs, but we should think which it is rumored he will soon be re- dant proof, is not at all to the relish present port-folio we should find no difficulty in congratulating himself and the Cabinet on his prospective transfer to what we doubt not would prove to veteran citizen soldier like himself much more congenial department.

Bleus of Quebec are flaunting their rabid disloyalty almost in the very faces of the Governor-General and his Royal wite The fact that they did not succeed so speedily as they expected in wreaking their vengeance on the Lieutenant-Governor has maddened them beyond endurance at His Excellency, whom, Sir John has practically told them, is blame for the delay. Their proverbial ancestral politeness, one might have thought, would have deterred these French Tory gentry from the inhospitabie rudeness of which they are guilty, on the very opening of the advent of His Excellency and Her Royal Highness to the city of Montreal, on the 24th Mr. Valee degrades his dignity as a mem ber of Parliament, to openly oppose, his organ, the Courier du Canada, the preparations to give the Royal party a befitting reception, and in this shabby expression of Tory disloyalsy he is being emulated by Le Canadier, which erstwhile denounced His Excellency as 7 better than a pirate, and which has not the decency to desist from its ignorant mudthrowing almost in the very presence of the Vice-Regal party. Tory loyalty in Canada never was more than skindeep, anyway, and the behavior of these anti-Letellier malcontents affords fresh proof of this disreputable fact.

CONSERVATIVE WORKINGWAN,

HON, EDWARD BLAKE. No wonder the political neutrals who decry party Government turn a wishful eye upon Hon. Edward Blake, and adjure him to become the deliver of the people from alleged party selfdom. No wonder the Tories regard the temporary retirement from public life with gratification, and dread the poinibility of his reappearance on the floor of Parliament, and no wonder that Reformers look up to him and look forward for him as the leader who shall in the not distant future lead the Liberal party on to sure and certain victory. No one could listen-as it was our privilege to do-to his masterly and eloquent address of Wednesday night, on matters of historical and current political interest, without being convinced that beyond all question the Hon. Eds ward Blake is the great pillar of Liberal 'Mr. Phipps ought to make sure of his strength, and that his name will soon be come the rallying cry of Reformers from one end of the country to the other. Not at all in disparagement of the conceded abilities and eminent services of our other public men in either party, but as a matter in which all unbiassed opinion is now united, the Hon. gentleman, though at present entirely out of the Parliamentary arena, is undoubtedly the man to whom the country is already looking as the head of its coming Government. His eloquence, his high mora tone, his advanced views, and, with all these, his magnanimous moderation to those who differ from him in opinion, all conspire to indicate him as the man who it should be considered necessary to have is sure at some no distant day to be entrusted with the destinies of the Dominion. We are all aware that admirathat his rank and service in the volunteer | tion of the towering intellectual greatness force of the country would be of conside and the statesmanlike qualities, of which this purpose. In nothing have erable service to him in the position to the Hon. Edward Blake has given abunmoved. If we could only be sure that our local contemporary, and such of its quite as competent a Cabinet Minister party confreres as possess not the ability to could be secured to take charge of his appreciate nor the manhood to recognize old timber is gone, our young timthe now generally admitted superiority of this truly regal Canadian statesman. At the expense of its own reputation for ordinary intelligence and penetration the a the local Tory organ has repatedly and oracularly pronounced the Hon. Elward Blake a miserable failure. As we have With their customary indecency, the hinted, to say so or to insinuate such thing is only to expose its own partyblinded narrowness of view to the public idicule and contempt. There is nothing entured in the statement that as orator and a statesman the Hon. Mr. Blake is to-day without a peer among all the public men of Canada, and it simply a loss, which is infinitely more the the country's than his own, that he has not at present a seat in the Federal Parliament. His grand address at the St. Lawrence Hall, Toronto, on Wednesday evening, was a master piece of eloquence, argument and illustration. His defence of the consistency of the Reform party, in power in the Ontario chamber, both as regarded himself and his successor
