TUESDAY EVENING, JUNE 24.

The example of Legislative bodies generally contagious. The disreputable proceedings of our Dominion Parliam in making night hideous with personal recriminations and otherwise disgraceful behaviour, has been emulated and imitated in the American Senate. Almost the very terms of personal affection, delieacy and propriety applied, for example, by Sir John Macdonald to Hon. D. A. Smith, when he branded him in impotent rage as a 'traitor,' 'coward' and 'liar, have been hurled by Mr. Conkling at a brother member in the American Senate. Doubtless the proprietors of bar-rooms and saloons, having due regard to the reputation of their houses, will take the alarm, as was the case in Canada, and check any indulgence is such language with the same peremptory injunction "No parliamentary language here!"

So far as this ancient city is concerned there have always been found some of its good people to take a firm stand in behalf of this great propriety. The Kingston Reformation Society did so for years. Perhaps this uses ful Association has not of late shown to the full its pristine vitality and energy, but its mantle in this respect has fallen upon other shoulders. Our city cabmen, in their zeal for the proprieties and demust and shall be observed. What other places in the wide Dominion can show up such a high standard of morality as is implied in the union of the backmen for the promotion of so commendable purpose? Canada will be the national model of propriety and the genuine champion of religion when its cabmen all shall emulate those of the Limestone City in their efforts to bring to a successful consummation the great work of Sabbath Reformation. When the reception fever was upon us perhaps we made ourselves ridiculous to the sober gaze of onlookers at a distance. We think not, however. The welcome to the Royal party here was enthusiastically loyal, but neither the proceedings nor the journalistic reports of them were open to the charge of fulsome laudation. But all are not so able thus to preserve their equilibrium. Daily contact with the distinguished party might have been supposed to moderate journalistic flunkeyism, but the correspondents who are narrating for the press the daily doings of the distinguished couple seem to be ever increasing danger of losing their heads. For lack of items of greater importance the exploits of the Royal party with hook and line are now being elaborately dished up for the public delectation. In these accounts, of course, the Princess is made to bear off the palm This is as it should be.
