Dr. Day's Extract of Malt.

Public Analyst Office, Montreal, July 24th, 1879. I hereby certify that I have made a careful chemical examination and analysis of an original battle of "DAY'S EXTRACT OF MALT. I find it to be a non-alcoholic Extract of Malt and Hops, containing "Diastase," a valuable nitrogenous active principle, which has the property of assisting digestion by the conversion of Franchy food into Saccharing, and hus promoting the assimilation of sarinaceous diet. The Extract keeps well and is Nutritive and Toxic, without being intericating. I con-sider it well prepared and a useful diestetic. J. BAKER EDWARDS. PH.D., D.Ch., F.C.S. This is largely colored-not the statement but the immigrants. It seems quite likely that difficulties of race down South may yet be solved, or at any rate materially simplified, by the departure of so many of the freedmen to pastures new. The negro migration from the Sonthern States to the African colony of Siberia was prompted by motives of self-betterment, but that was necessarily on too small a scale ever to effect the relations of the two races in the South. This western exodus, however, is so extensive as to be sure to tell for good on the condition both of those who go and those they leave benind. Both whites and blacks will be benefited at the South by this ex tensive displacement of population.

One of our exchanges quotes a story of Lord Lawrence to the effect that when Vice-Roy of India his judgment was sought to be warped in favor of a young Indian rajah who endeavoured to pass into His Lordship's hands under the table a sack of rupees. Lord Lawrence spurned the bribe with the cutting rebake that the offer was the greatest insult that could be offered to an Englishman, and warned the young Prince "never again to perpetrate so gress au offence to an English gentleman." How refreshing and yet how incredible do incidents like the above appear to Canadians accustomed to Tory rulers.
