AN OLD STORY REVIVED. - The dismissal of Lieut-Governor Letellier reminds the Montreal Herald of an old story, still current in Toronto, of the late Bishop, Strachan, who was a warm polis formed tician in the old days of Family compact ascendancy. the 'Gracie' a 'roaring' cruise. A 'THIN' EXPLANATION. - A COFFEE pondent of our contemporary complains that a man named Stringer has been sent here from Ottawa to inspect the certain work done at the Penitentiary for the Government. The correspondent thinks tailors in Kingston could be found to do this work. The News very humbly re marks: "We have no doubt the Government could readily find plenty of tailors as competent as this man Stringer who was employed by the Mackenzie Govern ment," Mr. Mackenzie is not Premier now, and the sins of the present Govern ment should not be saddled upon him. Such a defence is untenable.

THE EMBALMING. - The letter of Dr Sullivan in another column gives an ex planation which will not avoid disap pointment but which will serve to miti gate it to a very large extent. The em balming of the remains of the late Bishop of Kingston was done very hurredly, but its failure was not discovered until too late to apply a remedy. If the body of the beloved Prelate has not been exposed in the Church as it was announced it would be, it is because circumstances will not permit of it.

MILITARY COLLEGE CAPETS. - The em ployment of the Kingston Military Col lege Cadets, after their graduation, is a subject of much controversy. The Ottawa Heraldremarks: 'Thesplendid education afforded our young men at Kingston should not be lost to the country, but we fail to see what possible advantage can occure to us by spending large annual sums in order to assist the officering the English army. TO-MORROW'S FUNERAL,

The final arrangements are now being made for the funeral of the late Bishop of Kingston, the cersmonies in connection with which commence at o'clock, and will probably last until o'clock. As already intimated Bishop Duhamel, of Ottawa, and Jamot, of Serrepta, will be present, and possibly the Archbishop of Quebec. Letters of regret at not being able to attend have been received from the Bishops of Ogdensburg, Burlington, and Hamilton, Bishop Walsh, of London, who is now in Prince Edward Island, cannot get here in time for the funeral, and the Bishop of Mon treal and Archbishop of Toronto are absent from their dioceses - the former on a visit to places in the United States, and the latter on his way to Rome. nature of the service to morrow, or wh willtake part in it, are not decided upon, the details being deferred until the ar rival of certain clergymen this afternoon. A RECKLESS CRIMINAL.

OME OF THE OFFENCES OF THE MAN DET LOR, WHO ESCAPED WITH ONE WAGER FROM NAPANKE GAOL ON SUNDAY MORN

We gather from a late number of the Sapance Standard the criminal record of George Detlor, the wife beater and horse stayer. thief, who escaped with a companion named Wager from the Napanee gaol on Sunday morning. Early in July George Detlor, of Shetfield, was arrainged before Mayor James on a charge of assaulting and threatening his wife. The charge was preferred in February, 1878, before Mr. Jas. Aylsworth, of Tamworth who issued awarrant for his apprehension, and entrusted it to George Kellar, who has been on the look-out for him ever since Kellar saw him in Napance, and succeeded in securing him. He was held on the charge of assault and also as a horse | ball in Toronto during the stay of the thiel. On the 12th of July, 1876, he was Governor General. married, and he immediately commenced a course of harsh treatment, which began in wicked threats and ended in kicks and , travelling in Italy to collect materials. blows. His wife left his house and went home, whither he followed her, and by | burg that the troops of the 40th division promising to use her well induced her to at Jaratoff have been ordered to Turkes return with him, but they had not gone tau. far before his threats made her afraid to enter his house, and subjected her at once to a series of brutil kicks and rough handling. Having at last knocked her down he stood over her and ordered her to choose between killing him, or submitting to be murdered herself, he alleging, if she chose the latter, that he would cut his own throat. She succeed ed in getting a respite, and took an opportunity of escaping. He followed her, took away the bundle of clothes she had with her, struck and kicked her, and dering thre the clothes off her As soon as she days of comparative peace the old system | ever price they can get. of abuse was resumed, and on a favorable -portunity she ran away to Tamworth. where she remained for a week. Her of Burlington, Vt., has been arrest d husband compelled her to return. While | charged with embezzling $17,000 crossing Puzzle Lake he threatened to drown her unless she promised not to run named Ann Green came to the house, and the poor wife was compelled to witness brutalizing scones such as decency demands shall be veiled from the public. We could fill a column with the story of his holding an open knife forwarded from Halifax to Ottawa, with for death, of his bringing a chain into which tilled up his home life. At length, however, the poor wife made a shelter under the paternal roof. On the night of her escape her parents were afraid of Detlor, and a number of neigh bors were invited to remain all night Some one, supposed to have been the prisoner, came and contented himself with firing four bullets into the house, none of which did any harm. Had Mrs. Detlor been in the bed which she usually occupied when at home she would certainly have been killed. During last summer the wife became a mother. In the fall three men came, one appearing drunk. He was not recognised The others gave lictitious names, and asked to be allowed to lodge thereall hight In passing one bedroom door they caught a glimpse of some one sleeping there, and asked Mr. Wood if that was his daughter Mary Ann. They were answered with seats, that an immense audience will the affirmative, and on reaching the room granted them, left the "drunken" one on the bed, the door, and returned to the dining room. As soon as they were gone, one upstairs stealthily entered the sleeping apartment of Mrs. Detlor. A light revealed George Detlor. He told his wife that he had come to take his child. Under pretence of necessity Mrs. Detlor went down stairs and told her mother what she knew. 'Mrs. Wood hastened a neighbor, Mr. Lott, bidding her daugh ter follow her. Mr. Lott came prepared to render help, and the visitors finding their game was up, left without any for mality. After they had driven away. Kellar appeared on the scene to arrest Detfor, but the latter drew two pistols and took to the helds.

ENGLISH SOCIETY, Sara Bernhardt coms to be creating quite a sensation in England. The tashionable world is in ecstacies over her, and even the Prince and Princess of Wales are paying her homage Sara Bernhardt is not a great woman by any means. What is more to the point, she is notoriously not a pattern of modesty and virtue. That she should be able to push herself to the front and become the bright particular star of English society does not say very much for English society. She goes to receptions and private parties, and is well paid for going. On one occasion she kept a large company of guests, among whom were the Prince and Princess of Wales, waiting two hours for her arrival, although she was to take part in a theatrical representation. It is only within the last few years that a woman of the Sara Bernhardt class has been able to push hersel into what is called English society. Twenty years ago a respectable woman would have taken it as an affront to even mention the name of a Sara Bernhadt in her presence; for, to put the lady's case mildly, they say she has more than one
