How many things occur to undermine the popularity of the famous. tickleness of popular appliance is proverbial, and Hanlan's experience bids fair to furnish a fresh illustration of it. But yesterday he was the hero of the hour, as the champion of the old world and the new. Even already, however, his laurels are wilting, as many imagine the spell of his brilliant successess to have been Groken by the dead-heat issue of his tusale with Riley at Barrie. Considerable American crowing has been the result of this failure of Hanlan to win an easy victory over one who was not esteemed to be at all a formidable rival. What our rather envious cousins hope is by this incident revived that Courtney, at any rate, can collar him, and Hanlan is de clared to be anything but invincible. is rather strange that Riley's partial success should have been the means of overcoming Courtney's oft-repeated refusal to row again with Hanlan. Our oars man is blamed by some for closing so early for a new race with Courtney. Hanlan is known to be out of condition just now, but he can soon get in again, for ourselves we have not lost faith i the Champion's ability to hold his title against all comers.

What spur can there possibly be to the sudable ambition of Canadian scholars if it be known that the prizes of distinction and position to which they have every right to aspire are not for them to hope and work for, but that as fast as these im portant vacancies occur the authorities must look across the sea for men to ful them ? If better men are to be had there we would not insist upon 'the point but who will say that if the positions should be awarded to strangers imported for that purpose that the duties would be one whit better discharged than those of Principal Grant and the other gentlemen mentioned by our correspondent. The probabilities are that first-rate Brit ish scholars cannot be had for the salaries attached to the position. Infinitely better then to appoint a first-class ou sider. But we will go a step further and most sincerely believe and maintain that equally as good men can be obtained in Canada as an England, at any rate for all the practical purposes of these vacant professorships. In such a case then as that under consideration we have no decided preference for the home-trained candidates.
