will last but a few days. The Author of Pinalore.

Miss Kate Field says in Scribner that Mr. Arthur Seymour Sullivan was born both clever and lucky; and she adds that it is probably because of his genial and extravagant grandfather's existence that 'Pinafore' was written. For this gentle man, and Irish squire, spent his patrimony in riotous living, and his son Thomas found that he must work or starve. He was very fond of music and so adopted as a profession the art he loved. He became bandmaster of the Royal Military College at Sandhurst, and it was in the band-room that his son Arthur pas sed most of his childhood. At ten years old he played upon every wind instrument as well as upon the piano, which was taught him by his music loving mother. His talent for mischief he displayed one day when he was lost for five hours and was found in an old college room picking to pieces a venerable piano in order to know the secret of its construction. At fourteen years old he won, by an original composition, over twentythree other competitors, the Mendelssohn Scholarship of the Royal Academy of Music, and was thus enabled to study his art in Germany.

(Caicago Alliance.) In the early part of the late war, when Gen. Grant was in command of the army before Vicksburg a number of officers were gathered at his head quarters, bay ing a pleasant social time. One of them " lavited the party to join in a social place; all but one accepted. He asked to be excused, saying that he "never drank." The hour passed, and each weet his way his respective command.

THE OFFICER WHO NEVER DRANK.

AN INTERESTING INCIDENT OF THE WAR OF THE REBELLION.

A few days after this the officer who declined to drink received a note from Gen. Grant to report at headquarters. He obeyed the order, and was soon in the resence of the General Grant says to him: "You are the officer, I believe, for their acquaintance was slight, "who remarked the other day that you never drank." The officer modestly answered that he was. "Then," continued the General, "you are the man I have been I oking for to take charge of the Commissiary Department, and I order that you be detailed to that duty." He served his country faithfully until the close of the war, and was honorably discharged. Years passed, and Grant had come to be President. The officer had settled down to the duties of private life, and the littie incident was cherished as a pleasant The trouble on the border between Texas and Muzico along the Rio Grando attracted the attention of Congress, and a commission was ordered to ascertain the facts and report. Again Fresident Grant remembered the man who "never drank," and appointed him chairman of the board. The place was accepted, and he entered faithfully upon the work; the report submitted shows the thoroughness with which the duty was discharged. While engaged in the work he made the acquaintance of a gentleman who owned an extensive cattle ranch in Southern Texas. That acquaintance inpired confidence, and, years after, when the Texan gentleman decided to sell his ranch, he placed it in the hands of the man who "nover drank," and during the last month he has effected a sale to an English company, of the ranch of eign markets, slaugh ring their meat on their ranch from their own herds.
