SPENCERIAN STEEL PENS.
A Wonderful Clock.
Fair's Meier, of Detroit, has devoted ten years and $7,000 to the construction of a clock. It is eighteen feet high, eight broad, and weighs two tons. It has a great variety of automatic devices, but the most remarkable are those connected with the striking of the time. At the end of every quarter hour an infant in a carved niche strikes with a tiny hammer upon the bell which he holds in his hand. At the end of each half hour a youth strikes, at the end of three quarters of an hour a man, and at the end of an hour a girl, strike. The bell that he holds in his hand begins to play, and a scene is enacted upon a platform. Washington slowly rises from a chair to his feet, extending his right hand to present the Declaration of Independence. The door on the left is opened by a servant, admitting all the Presidents from Washington's time; also de facto President Hayes. Each is dressed in the costume of his day, and the scenes are good. Facing in file before Washington, they pass, raising their hands as they approach him, and, walking naturally across the platform, disappear through the opposite door, which is promptly closed behind them by a second servant.
