> OSMAN PASHA A FAVORITE.-OSMAN Pasha used to maintain discipline among the officers of his army by peculiar methods. On one occasion a captain and a lieutenant, were brought to Osman, charged with cowardice in the presence of the enemy. The captain was a head taller than ()sman, and very strongly built. Both culprits stood before the general, in a humble attitude, with their heads bent. Caman spoke to them at first in a low, grave tone, and then sprang suddenly upon the lieutenant, lifted him into the air with his left hand, struck him repeatedly with his right fist on the head and chest, and then dashed him to the ground. He turned next to the captain and administered a similar thrashing. For all this he was a great favorite among his soldiers, who would kiss his portrait devontly, and even utter
