THE LATE POPES.

During this century five Popes have been elected, and by death have been removed from the Pontificate. The first was Pius VII (Gregorio Barnaba Chiaramonti), native of Cesena, elected in 1800 the second in order was Leo XII (Anni bale della Genga), native of Romanga elevated in 1823; his successor was Pius VIII (Cardinal Castiglioni), native of Cingoli, elected in 1829; Gregory XVI (Mauro Cappellari), native of Belluno, made Pope in 1831, then came Pope Pius IX, made head of the Church in 1846, and whose death recently has led to the promotion of Cardinal Pecci, now known BE LNO XIII.

Whatever cheapens the necessaries of life will be admitted to be a public benefit. Fuel is certainly one of the prime essentials to comfort, even to existence itself, in a climate like ours in the winter season. Under old time circumstances the rigour of the Canadian winter brought with it its own partial relief in the fact commendable feature of the new Act, is that our almost unfailing good sleighing that which will make it possible for whole furnished the market with full supplies provinces to vote upon this question at of fuel, and thus kept the price of wood one time. The fact is patent that the faci- will conspire to render it such a law as lities of our local railway have made all the country requires, and public opinion the difference. The growing distance between our woods and our market has been materially lessened by the iron horse, and the K & P. RR. thus becomes the solution of the mystery and a proven public benefaction. But a few weeks since a false and mistaken cry was raised against the read and its officers. as though it or they were inimical to the interests of the city. In the very practical and important matter to which we have alluded, it has already proved to be the peer man's-in fact every man'sfriend. In the face of this fact it has been charged that, particularly in the matter of liquer legislation, the Reform party-and especially the Premier-had gone back upon the protestations of former times, and that every subterfuge was being eagerly empleyed to avoid the question of the restriction or prohibition of the liquor traffic. But apart altogether from Conservative hypocrisy, it is a great injustice to the Reform party to charge it with dodging this great question. The facts disprove the allegation. In the Ontario House the Croeks, Act-a measure which has, so far, answered all the expectations of its promoters -was submitted Yesterday the Hon. Mr. Cartwright, Finance M nister, delivered his Budget speech in the House of Commons, and from the Globe (which contains a verbatim report of it, as well as a lengthy and exhaustive criticism), we learn that it was not merely an exposition of the pelicy of the Government at the present time, but a defence of their policy in the past, and a review of the financial history of the Dominion's first decade, terminating on the 30th of June, 1877. Mr. Cartwright spoke with great clearness and distinctness.
