that to receive. I don't know you, and I don't know you would not follow the practice so consistently.

"It is even so," replied Mrs. Stanley. "I had no property I could do with as I have done, but my father left me a widow for his property, and I have the luxury of benevolence instead of leisure."

"I should be happy to have you call on us, although we are strangers. We call on you as an acquaintance, and we are glad to see you," said Mrs. Stanley.

"Your name is Stanley, I believe?" said the doctor. "Theodore Dunsell is my name, madam."

"Did you ever live in Boston?" inquired Grace. "It is my native place. Are you acquainted in Boston, Miss Stanley?"

"Yes," answered Grace, "was your father's name Dunsell?" "It was. Did you ever know him?"

"You call on me as an acquaintance, and you will tell me of a very singular occurrence that took place some time since."

"Doctor Dunsell did as we were desired and heard the relation which we have given above, about the dinner, and he classed it as a case of delirium tremens, and seemed so well pleased with the charming Grace, that in less than six months Miss Grace Stanley was known as Mrs. Doctor Dunsell, who with her husband were well known among the most whole-some philanthropists in the city."
