MONDAY EV'NG, MAY 6, 1878. BLUE EYES,

NO. 106.

At noonday on the crowded street,
With absent mind I sauntered far,
Unnoting aught, till suddenly
A face flashed by me like a star. One moment seen, then swift the throng Closed jealously about its prize, And all the memory left to me Was this; she had blue eyes,

A woman's eyes, you say, not— They were to shy, to full of spring, And in there snnift depths I saw A girls soul's April blossoming No picture of her face so fair Within my memory lies, But like bright stars along my heart Still flash her bright blue eyes.

Her hand's touch, and her voice's tone Are thing that I may never know; Albiet, I think the one is soft, The other musical and low, And shall we meet again ? The hope Flames for a moment and then dies And all the memory left to me.

THE SHANNON SHOOTING CASE STATEMENT PROM MISS WYNN.

Miss Bertha Wynn, who was recently shot by John Shannon, school teacher at Meyersburg, has addressed the following communication to the Campbellford Her-

DEAR SIR,—You have been wrongly in-formed about me. I never thought Shannon cared anything more for me than a pupil, nor never did I think that he paid me any more attention than he did the other girls of my age. My parents did not forbid me going to school to Shannon. On Thursday morning I started for school, and on the way I heard something that Shannon had said about me, and turned round and came home and told my mother that I would never go another day to Shannon. At noon my mother and I were alone. I was up stairs. Shannon rapped at the door and mother opened it. He handed her my Mental Arithmetic and said, "this is Bertha's Mental," and the he saked if I was in. Mother said yes, and then he asked why I was not at school. My mother said "from all that we have heard, we thought it was better to keep her at home." Then he told her not to say another word until he was done talking. He was telling her what was not the truth, and I coutradicted him, and then he came upstairs not speaking to me, and shot me. He never spoke to me after he came upstairs. Mother followed him upstairs and screamed "murder," and then he said that he would shoot her, and she ran down stairs. He followed her to the back door and turned and went out the front door.
