According to the New York Sun there is very high character living on Long laland in a state of incognito. This is the teir to the Earldom of Perth and Men ort, by name George Montifex Drummond, who is also Duc de Melfrot, Comte de Lussan and Baron de Valrosh, of the French Peerage. He was born in 1856, and his father, Viscount Forth. died in 1861. His mother, a Miss Capel, niece of the Earl of Essex, died eight years after her husband. Young Drummond went to live with his grandfather Capel, fell in love with Elizabeth, his grandmother's lady's maid, and, when his paternal grandfather wanted him to go home, declined to do so, and said that, instead, he should pay a visit to America. At this time, the ardent young lover was but fifteen years of age, but selling a horse. boat, gon, and other valuables, he started for Liverpool, was married to the maid under the name of George Johnson, and sailed for New York, as steerage passenger, the same night. The precocious young gentleman, and his wife, considerable his senior in years, on their landing at New York, at first went to the Stevens' House, and notwithstanding the efforts of the British Consul, acting by the request of the Earl of Perth, he refused to return home; but, instead, engaged himself as a farm-hand on Long Island, his wife taking service, also, as a domestic. After a sickness, the two went into another service at Yonkers, and thence, passing through various kinds of servitude, they, at last, got back once more to Long Island, where they got married over again, in case the first knot should not be held to be well tied. When the young nobleman was eighteen, and his wife twenty-three, they had a son, who died ; followed, however, two months ago, by another, who promises to live. His Lordship now lives, we are told, as a fisherman, at a place called Yaphank He is described as an amiable-looking young fellow, in a battered sou-wester, blue bennel shirt with rolling collar, high rubber boots, into which his trowsers as to necessary certificates to be obtained in or were tucked, and his hands were in his der to be entitled to this bonus. trowsers' pockets. Lady Drummond is For Tickets and any further information ap young, plump, and ross-coloured. The ply to H. BOURLIER, General Agent. To baby nobleman was put to sleep on the sofa, and the reporter was invited to tea. The heir to the Earldom regrets nothing; makes $500 a year by fishing; gets $200 from home, says America is the country after his heart; declares New York the finest city, Broadway the grandest street, and Brookhaven, where he lives, the aweetest village in the world. It appears he also admires the language as he now speaks pure Yankee. When he comes to his own, he will have a fine place at Brookhaven, and live there part of every year Meanwhile, he does not go home because the condition on which he can do so is that he shall part with his wife. He, therefore, enjoys himself as best hcan do with plenty of garden truck, culti vated by his own hands, chickens and ducks raised in his own yard, plenty of game of his own shooting, and an admirable custore, due to the skill of her lady-I'pon the Health of Teeth
