It is stated that not half a dozen De mocrats in the United States Congress could be persuaded to vote for any resolution declaring Hayes and Wheeler ineligible for the retention of their respective offices. No wonder. Had I'll den himself been elected he would not nearly so far have promoted the interests of the Democratic Party as Gen. Hayes has so far done. In that case Tilden would, of course, have been supported by his own party, but the Republicans would have been solid in their opposition to his administration. As the matter stands, however, not only has Hayes carried out the Tilden programme, but because he has done it his own party has been divided and alienated beyond the apparent possibility of repair. If the demoralization of the Republicans is a party advantage to their opponents, President Hayes has certainly done the latter an immense service in this regard. He has alienated a large and influential wing of his own political friends without, to any extent, having won over to his side the Democratic party. True, the reluctance to do so is far less from a new whelming in the majority, and the Tofound attachment to his regime than from a desire to give him as extended op named but to use them as mere stopportunity of completing the disintegra- gates, with the certainty that defeat resolution of Congress to go behind the in constituencies where parties are pretty utes he had wrenched off a window that purpose. face of the Louisiana returns may serve evenly balanced, as in the case of Mr. | weight and broken through the wall. I say us fools; have been an admirer of the great Sir John, and so have a good many of my fellow workingmen of Kingston, but of late years I have been beholding the right honorable gentleman through a very different pair of spectacles to what I used to, and I have been trying to find out what there is in the man to call for the blind adoration of the Kingstonians. will confess candidly, that one reason why I liked Sir John, in by-gone days, was his glorious conviviality. He was hail fellow well met, etc. remember, Mr. Editor, we used to have jolly times at elections years ago. When think of the old election days-when money was plentiful and whiskey cheap when the most jovial and frolicsome candidate was most popular, I am startled at the motives which induced men to stand by their political favorites. But those days are past, times have changed, and men have changed. We now live in a sober and earnest age. Times are afford to stand by a man whose political tendeucies have become obsolete and are dangerous to the commercial interests of the country. We want a man to represent us in Parliament who has at heart the vital interests of Kingston. Sir John has made a great noise in the political world for the past thirty years. He may have done great things, but certainly nothing more sublime than thousands of other men could have done had the fates drifted them, as they had drifted Sir John, into the foremost rank of popuiarity, where his almost superhuman impudence and cheek lifted him to that dizzy ammence from which he has so But what, I ask, has all the past triumphs and defeats of Sir John Macdon-

I desire to see Kingstonions live in Kingston, spend their money in Kingston, and exert all their efforts for the advancement of Kingston, socially, intellectually, commercially and morally. And the first man to take this stand should be the city member of the House of Commons. It is all very fine to talk about what members of Parliament do in England-about fine gentlemen of quality representing localities they never saw, and so forth. It will not "hold water" in Canada. By the well directed labor of which he happened to be born, or as to his head and hand his commercial enterprises are a continual source of benefit to the city and manifold blessings to many of its inhabitants. He does more real substantial good to the old limestone city in one week than Sir John Macdonald otherwise ! Mr. Gunn has at heart in an eminent degree the advancement of King ston's commerce.
