

(Hon. Mr. Cartwright at Lindsay.) What have the Government done that they should be censured with a loss of power? In reply to that, I would say that having faced a series of engagements such as no other Government in Canada had ever confronted—(hear, hear)—having provided for engagements amounting to over $150,000,000 incurred by their predecessors, and having faced the necessity of incurring enormous additional expenditure for interest on capital sum in works which these gentlemen had undertaken—having done this they had received from the Canadian people a figure which did not exceed one dollar, the amount they had found when they entered office (if they would deduct the amount of their permanent investments as he had a right to ask them to do); they had persisted in the teeth of the strongest pressure in refusing to impose undue taxation on the people of Canada; in refusing to tax them for anything but the general public good; in refusing to sacrifice the general interests for the sake of a few individuals. (Hear, hear, and loud cheers.) They had succeeded in the circumstances he had endeavored in prosecuting huge public works more rapidly than before; they had maintained the credit of Canada, and in spite of all that had been said by the leaders of the Opposition they had so far entirely failed to disprove his statement that he had effected very large loans at cheaper rates than had ever been obtained before. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) They had kept up the credit of the people of Canada in every way, so that today, in spite of bad harvests and the effects, in the midst of a commercial depression extending from one end of the civilized world to the other, Canada stood higher than ever before in the money markets of London. (Loud cheers.) And pray, what was the exchange which the people of Canada were asked to make?

What? Credit! Credit! That was the only other remedy. The parlor carpet astride the fence is being beaten around. Credit! Credit! From parlor and kitchen and hall; A yard from Toma, a yard from Joe, Two miles a murlach—that's all. Mop! Scrub! Wash! A painter on every hand; Hangers of paper in every room, And plumbets increasing the band. Growl! Snarl! Groan! The dishes mixed up with the chairs; The plates and bowls and plates and bowls, And wife now work with her hands.

Break! Cake! Tea!

Anything must will do; Plates are sticky and knives are gone—in color the butter is blue.

Rip! Bang! Slam!

When can we go to bed?

A bed made on the floor.

Ouch! Rub! Daub!

Pain from coming to bear,

The whitewasher coming at early dawn,

To make—a hole of the place.

Doze! Dream! Wake!

Then fall asleep again;

To dream again at last,

With solemn funeral train.

Cue every year—

Rip things up and tear—

Smash! crash! bang!

Growl! snarl! glare!

COUNTRY NOTES.

Nine hundred boxes of cheese were sold at Bolton on the 27th of May, for $7 cents.

Mr. R. J. Wright, of Morven, sold to Mr. Tremble, of Napanee, a yoke of oxen weighing nearly 4,000 lbs., for the sum of $182.50.

Syracuse Standard: Reports of the ravages of the Hessian fly in the wheat crop reach us from all quarters. In many places wheat fields are being plowed up and planted with corn.

In view of how Mr. Tracy's many friends gave him a sugar social, which was a success, Music was furnished by Miss Mary Benjamin and Miss Sophia Benjamin, of Ossawa, and Miss Lucy, of Sydenham. The proceeds were about $47.

In Liverpool trouble in the grain trade is feared in consequence of the heavy decline in price on account of the spread crop prospects in America, and the quiet political outlook. Speculators in California cargoes, chiefly in London, are now under very serious obligation.

Every farmer should keep a pot of mixed paint in his workshop, and should apply it liberally to plows, wagons, harness, raps, and implements exposed to the weather, causing them to last twice as long as usual. Farming tools and implements are less frequently run out by hard service than used up by useless exposure to the weather.

An authority advises against whipping a balky horse; boisterous words also confuse and unmake a horse. Let the voice be gentle, and try to make all the talkers down, which have been successfully used: 1. Tie a string round the animal's ear, close to the head, or 2) around the leg just below the knee, to be removed after he has travelled some distance; 3. Fill the mouth full of earth or some other disagreeable substance. The idea is to divert the balky's mind to another object.

The Perth Courier says: "Wool is now selling at 23 cents per pound only. Yet if we had not the Americans to sell to, we could not afford to bring wool for 10 or 20 cents. They buy all that is produced in this country. We import little or no wool from the States. The only kind which our woolen manufacturers can use for the finer goods they make, comes from Australia, South Africa, and the South American States. This does not enter into competition with Canada wool."

What if produce be cheap? All other commodities will be corresponding cheap. If a dollar will purchase twice as much cloth, and twice as much tea and sugar, and twice as much flour, then a dollar will buy butter and meat at a lesser price than in war times. Cheapness is a good thing in itself; it multiplies the comforts of life greatly, and what is of much value, distributes them more evenly. A dollar will to day go as far as two dollars in better times. Farmers should think of these facts and suspend all croaking indefinitely.

The reports of the state of the crops gathered from all sections of the United States show a remarkably forward season, and given promise of a great harvest. The country has never been in better condition, and the crops are but little less in their progress than the sown fields. It is remarkable also that the insect pests seem to have retired in o-suspenso, apparently damaged by the overwhelming luxuriance of vegetation. The caterpillars even seem to have pitched but few of their tents this year. The festive potato bugs here and there, but it is slow and stupid intruder, and may be easily cared for.

As a sign of the returning popularity of the valuable Aspirinum, which might be the chief article of trade of the New York State Agricultural Society, the Aspirins outnumbered the heretofore predominant Jersey. The Aspirins, as a butter-making brand, is hardly a rival of the Jerseys; these two should be companions, and not rivals, for each one has invaluable points. A fact of curious significance also, at this fair, was the absence of several of the old successful show-birds, and the entry of new exhibitors, who carried off the honors. Prize-takers are too frequently imported. Would it not be well to keep prize only for native birds.
