SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH

A purely vegetable distillation entirely unlike all other remedies.

IF every body, black and white, is subjected to the disease known as Catarrh of the Bladder, it is obtained in vapor, condensed and bottled. When the urine is voided, it is found in the water, and is very offensive to the nose and throat. It is a very dangerous disease, and if not cured, it will lead to the most serious consequences.

Sanford's Radical Cure is a local and constitutional remedy, and is applied to the seat of the disease, and at once operating, it relieves the patient of all his sufferings, and restores him to his former state of health. It is a purely vegetable distillation, and is entirely free from all the deleterious effects of other remedies.

When afar on the glancing billow, Away mid the dancing spray, Where the sea-birds have their pillow, It covers us as from the sky, Then comes that chilling murmur, Those tones so sad and wild, For of water we see the foam, Is the heart of the ocean.

The Prairie Region of Canada. An examination of a map of North America will show that a great plain stretches north and south, between the Gulf of Mexico and the Arctic Ocean. This great plain occupies the continent between the Rocky Mountains range on the west and the Appalachian range on the east. It is divided into three principal drainage basins. One drains to the south into the Gulf of Mexico; another north into the Atlantic by the great River St. Lawrence. Of these three basins, that of the St. Lawrence is by far the largest, and the northern is fully as large as the other two together. The St. Lawrence basin, on the boundary between the United States and Canada, occupies part of both countries, the southern basin is almost wholly in the United States, the northern basin is almost wholly in Canada, and the entire boundary between the two latter basins is in contact approximately coincident with the 49th parallel of latitude—the southern limit of the interior of Canada. It will thus be seen that the great continental plain of North America is divided naturally, as well as artificially, through the centre. The prairie region, so called, is somewhat triangular in form. One side coincides with the international boundary line and extends from the 93rd to the 113th meridian; another side follows the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains, from the 49th to about the 64th parallel of latitude. The third side, about 1,600 miles in length, skirts a remarkable series of lakes rivaling in size Lakes Erie and Ontario. These great water-filled depressions lie in a generally straight north-westerly and southeasterly direction. They embrace Great Slave Lake, Athabasca, Lake Wollaston, Deer Lake, and Lake of the Woods, and they appear to occur geologically on the separating line between a broad belt of Laurentian or metamorphic rocks and the softer siliceous morpheic rocks and the softer siliceous formations. This great triangular-shaped region is estimated to measure about 300,000,000 of acres. Its base running across the country, it is probably probably average less than 1,000 feet above the sea, and its apex, near where the international boundary line enters the Rocky Mountains, will probably be about 4,000 feet above the sea level. The region generally may be described as a great plain sloping from its apex in a north-easterly direction downwards to its base, but the inclination is not uniform and unbroken. Several terraces and well-defined escarpments or stretching across the country are met with at intervals. A great proportion of the surface gently rolling, and hills of no great height occur here and there. The rivers of this district of the country, during a great part of their course in deep eroded channels, frequently of considerable width, and as the superficial formations are for the most part drift or soft rock, the channels which have been furrowed out are but little obstructed by falls or steep rapids. They generally present a uniform descent, and the long stretches of some of the rivers, although the current is swift, are capable of being navigated. A wide and fertile region to the south of the main Saskatchewan is a prairie, without trees or shrubs of any sort; the treeless prairie passes by easy gradations into open woodland with sparse timber, and in the north of the Saskatchewan woodland appears in various localities. On Peace River there are extensive prairies; there is, also, an agreeable mixture of woodland and prairie, and this character of vegetation appears to prevail for a considerable distance still further north.

A Morning Event. The Chicago correspondent of the T-ry Times says: "Speaking of queer things in the history of house renting, certainly the queerest I have ever come to my notice occurred to a friend of mine, the merit of its strangeness being its literal truth. A little more than a year ago he rented a house in a party who was a stranger, but who, during the first month's rent in advance, and having every appearance of being a respectable man, was counted by the agent as a good tenant. The first of the second month, when my friend went to collect his rent, he imagined his surprise at not finding any house upon the lot. Some time during the month the house had been moved away, and to this day he has been unable to find a sign or trace of it. I have often heard of tenants leaving a house without paying their rent, but this is the first case I ever knew or heard of where a tenant not only got away with his rent, but with the furniture of the house, and things differently in Chicago, you know."

Political Notes. The Conservatives of Pictou are to have a meeting for the nomination of candidates for both the Local and Dominion Houses on June 11th.

Yesterday's Freeholder of Cornwall says:—It has already been known in one way or another, to the people of Cornwall at least, that Mr. A. F. Macdonald, in pursuance of a promise that he had made to his friends a year or two ago, has withdrawn from Parliamentary life and that he will not again, for some time at any rate, be a candidate for the representation of Cornwall in the House of Commons. It has in this manner also become known that Mr. D. B. Macdonald, Q.C. will offer himself a candidate for the seat which Mr. Macdonald has held for the last five years, and which is now about to close, and from which he has determined to withdraw.
