Mr. Speaker Turcotte.

(Free Press of Friday.)

As to Mr. Turcotte, as we have shown from the official record, he voted consistently against the railway and tax policy of the late Ministry, and could not now oppose the policy of Mr. Joly without stultifying his record. His action gives effect to the undoubted will of the people, and preserves the Province from a dead-lock, which could not have failed to be most injurious to the best interests of the Province. Mr. Chapleau's insults and abuse are the best endorsation of his course which he could have desired; nor need he be at all ashamed to have his name ranked with Mr. Sicotte's, which occupies a place in our political history, which Mr. Chapleau has placed himself by his recent conduct, beyond the reach of ever attaining. We have no doubt that no one will be more heartily ashamed of his conduct yesterday than Mr. Chapleau himself, when he returns to the coolness of reason. It now remains for the majority of the House to remain firm and united against the attacks which will be made, with all the unscrupulous violence of desperation, by the defeated faction, and there need be little doubt that when Mr. Joly's policy is fairly before the Assembly, the more moderate and conscientious of those sitting on the Opposition benches will be constrained to support his measures is the interest of the Province. All those who voted yesterday with Mr. Chapleau are not with him in placing party before country, and we look to see, when the House is fairly settled down to work, Mr. Joly backed in his efforts at reform and retrenchment, and to redeem the Province from the position to which it was brought by the De Boucherville party by a sufficient working majority to carry on public affairs in a firm and efficient manner.
