The Canadian Commission has caused a large globe to be printed on the ticket appended to contributions, and on this globe Canada appears to swallow up the greater portion of North America. This is shrewd and one cannot help admitting that it is rather humiliating to find the United States outdone in shrewdness by her comparatively feeble neighbor. In the Canadian section great attention has been paid to one feature, which is always of prime importance at exhibitions, and which the United States almost neglected on this occasion. I allude to the use of photography for displaying and explaining the resources and peculiarities of a country A large space has been fitted up with walls, on which hundreds of photographs show the peculiarities of Canada in a very comprehensive manner. A Frenchman or a German can step into this quarter for an hour and come out with such a comprehension of the character and capacity of the country as he could get in no other way save by travel. The Canadian photographs are illustrative, first of the national games. Enormous pictures showing the river opposite Montreal with all the male population enmoney to the Provinces. The relation of melancholy facts in fir better. The story that bids for tears instead of laughter is certainly the one most appropriate in the promises for if t sere is anything sad in this world it is schoffact of drunkenness with the innumerable evils it always brings. We were implemed not long since, for instance, with a brief experience of the good old man who was slightly intoxicated for one night only, as related by himself. "I went, home angry and schamed," he said, "and half gone with horror of what my wife Sarah would say about it. I took off my shoes and hung them on the gate-post in the excess of my caution and timedity. I climbed that foot-board slowly, painfully, and with the utmost caution and secrecy. You have heard, perhaps, how excessively large and threatening every noise is in the stillness of a dark night, particularly when you are trying to keep still yourself, and occassionally straining your ears in fear of some sound that is nevertheless expected and pretty sure to come. That was what ailed me. My heart beat like a drum, and the clock in the room ticked as if it would have liked to arouse the entire neighborhood.
