A Long LI T. - The Echo gives a list of the vessels built at Mill Point since 1871, which includes thirteen schooners of 206,000 bust.els, capacity, two steam tugs, the steamer Empress of India and two steam yachts, one of which has not yet been launched. In addition, six schooners and the steamer Alexandria were rebuilt during the same period .

THE CONTRAST. - The city to-day bears a strong contrast to what it did yesterday, so far as life on the streets is concerned. It was nearly midnight last night before some of the excursion parties got and small parties in vehicles were leaving at all hours during the night, and could not have reached home until day had been well advanced.

BISHOP ()'BRIEN. - The Christian Brothere are selling well executed lithographs (life size) of Bishop O'Brien, by the celebrated Burland-Desbarats Lithovarious styles. Picture without frame, one dollar.

THE FOURTH AT THE CAPE. - All doubt as to Hanlan's intention to row are set at rest. The champion carsman, who won so easily at Brockville yesterday, has decided to go to the Cape on Thursday, a double team started on Barrie street posely, it is supposed, to enter for the with that matchless fluid. and there he will be matched against the same men who pulled against him at Brockville. Thus the day will be a memorable one for our American cousins. Hundreds will go from here to see the regatta.

Parallel Case.

Both the Czar and his uncle, the Emperor of Germany, have twice narrowly escaped being shot; but the deadliest and most nearly successful attempt upon the life of the former was of a more insidious kind, and is still known to only a very few persons, even in Russia. There of the pupits, and to all triends of education is in the Winter Palace at St. Peters. burg a small 'elevator,' consisting of an easy-chair fixed upon a stand, originally constructed for the Czar Nicholas, who was wont to mount in this fashion to his cabinet on the third floor of the palace. On one occasion, after a state dinner, the present Czar, instead of taking his seat in the chair as usual, offered the place to a lady of rank, who had been a friend of his mother. The Countess, flattered by the compliment, took the seat at once; but she had not risen many feet when the chain snapped, and down came the chair with a terrific crash, flinging out its occupant upon the floor with a broken limb and other serious injuries. The dismay of the company was extreme, and all were loud in expressing their thankfulness that the Czar him-elf had so narrowly escaped a catastrophe which, however, no one looked upon in any other light that of a very unfortunate accident, but one of the imperial pages, a shrewd works. young fellow, who had himself witnessed the catastrophe, had his own thoughts about this 'accident,' and took the earliest opportunity of inspecting the broken | First Excursion of the Season had been sawn halfthrough, close to the staple. The announcement of this discovery fell like a thunderbolt upon the assembled grandees, and not a moment was lost in calling up the palace servants for examination, when it was found that a foreign lacky, who had entered the ser. vice some months before, and had up to to that time bere an excellent character, had unaccountably disappeared. affair, however, was hushed up, and to this day many persons who are acquainted wi h the story, consider the whole occurrence either imaginary or purely accidental. - New York Times.
