A PROTECTIONIST ITEM.

It is said by these who claim to kno that Mr. Haggart, the well known manu facturer of Brampton, has paid during the past year a cash bonus or royalty o $10,000 to the American patentee of certain horse rake, which, among other agricultural instruments, is made at Mi Haygart's machine works. An enermous number of these rakes has been tarned out lately, and Mr. Haggart has been able to pay the above large sum t the inventor, and after that to net every rake a handsome margin for him self and all who handle his goods for hi throughout the country. Can the condition of our manufacturers be a ver-"struggling" one where a feat like this is possible? If, after praying for the brain-work of inventors to the tune of ter thousand a year on a single article o manufacture, a 'good thing' can be made out of the mere mechanical production of it, our manufacturers cannot be in the desperate condition in which they have for educational purposes, been represented. Suppose the article in question had been invented at home, and the bonus for that purpose had been saved to the manufacturer as the reward of his own brainwork, the realized profit would have been so much the more munificent for the 'struggling' manufacturer. Under such circumstances, is it fair to expect all other classes of the community to submit to an operous taxation in order to enhance the prosperity of the already best off class in the country! And yet this is precisely what the selfish protectionists are asking the people of Canada to do. By the way, would some Tory political economist please tell us who pays the royalty above referred tol Is it the manafacturer or the consumer? The selling price of every machine was determined with a view to the payment of that invention assessment, and the consumer paid it. So with every species of protection. It is simply the imposition of taxation which the consumer has to pay, no matter under how precious a guise the ogre of taxation is concealed.

How comes it that amid all the Tory din about industrial ruin and desolation under the present Reform regime, our manufacturers are beyond comparison better off than their brethren over the border ! All accounts concur in proving this to be the fact. More than this: no only are our manufacturers relatively better off than their protected confreres in the States, but they are far, far more prosperous than their fellow citizens in other spheres of business at home tio where you will in Canada, particularly in Ontario, and the comparative prosperity, in fact the affinence of Canadian manufacturers is a fact that cannot escape the attention of the most indifferent of server. These very classes in whose be half so much mock Tory sympathy and crocodile grief are being expended are infinitely better off than their neighbours in the city of Brantford, where, on the occasion of the recent "ovation" to the Tory Chieftain a wooden anvil suspended from a street arch bore the inscription "Under Mackenzie I rust," the anvils were ringing instead of rusting, and the humming hives of industry were in full blast There and in other places, at the very time when the industrial lie was being inquatriously circulated that Canadian industries were going to the dogs, facto ries were being extended so as to afford additional room for enlarged operations. In the face of the facts of the case, it were certainly foolish to deny that in many places Canadian manufacturers have suffered from the depression. That they wuld not, when the whole industrial be a 'es prostrate and paralyzed, sould would be a which we cannot expect all, however, the in our favour. LIBERALISM, CATHOLIC AND POLITICAL.

Before the pious Ultramontanes of Ocebec have had time to intervene, and to advise Pope Leo that he had done them, -his only faithful Canadian children -the irreparable damage of bestowing his apostolic benediction on one of their Cirest enemies, to wit, the Hen. K. Laflamme; before, we say, they have had time to recover from that shock yet another is announced. Despatches from Rome intimate that Hon. Mr. Pelletier, is the recent recipient of a similar communication from the Holy See, conveying to him the Papal acknowledgments of the felicitations of the Catholic members of our Senate and imparting to him personally, as well as to his co-subscribers severally the blessing of the head of the Catholic Church. It may be urged that religious matters. Very true, but what have the Rouges of Quebec to do with religion ? Have they not all been declarat the instance of Langevin, the hero of other like shining lights of the Church the altar as heretics and atheists, and as utterly unworthy of the confidence and the votes of the French Canadian electors! And yet here we find the leaders of this actually the favoured recipients of his grace and benediction. To fly in the face of the Supreme benediction and curse in the name of their religion that which the Pope has blessed, they will hardly have the presumption to venture to do. That the awkward contretemps will plunge the Bleus into the blues there can be no doubt but naught can avail them. Even the pions Langevin with his cross of St. Gregory about his neck will scarcely le bouton est perdu Monsieur?" The Tory Chieftain told his Montreal audience last year that hundreds of tho sands of Canadians had left this country power of the adjoining nation. As to their going the statement was quite true; they went in his time. Now, as the Addington elector put it to him at Railton, vain and cru I as the French are can be why did not Sir John give the country protection then when he had so golden an opportunity? The depletion which occurred during his regime might have rendered protection effective. When times were good enough in the States to attract Canadians thither, they were cer tainly good enough to keep Americans at home, and had Sir John clapped on his heavy taciff then it might have proved of some temporary advantage to Cana dian workmen, since they would have been comparatively free from that competition which they now have to encounter from the incoming tide of Anternan labour. That was the time, if ever, to im. pose a protection duty, although even in to expect it. The might have held the frontier of the new t rritory. that case, it would still be the taxation of the many for the benefit of the few Why did not the Tory leaders give the country protection when they were power? Now that they are in Opposition, however, and are hard up for a cry, they are demanding for the country what they themselves refused or neglected to give it, and at a time, too, when the all-levelling depression would flood with surplus American labour, and thus render nugatory, all protectionist attempts to relieve Canadian industrial distress.
