Excursion and Visit, The Adams Centre silver cornet band had their excursion to-day, taking the train as far as Cape Vincent, then the steamer Maud to Kingston, thence down the river to Westminster Park, and return. The party numbered about 300, and it was social, respectable and orderly. At this place a halt of half an hour was made, and during that time the handsomely uniformed and very efficient band serenaded a number of citizens. We are grateful for the distinction of a serenade, which the staff and employees generally appreciated. The band has the appearance of being a strong organization.
