THE GREATEST
WONDER OF MODERN TIMES
HOLLOWAY'S
PILLS & OINTMENT
The PILLS Purify the Blood, correct all disorders of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys and Bowels, and are invaluable in all complaints incidental to Females.
The OINTMENT is the only reliable remedy for Bad Legs, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers, of however long standing. For Bronchitis, Diptheria, Coughs, Colds, Gout, Rheumatism, and all Skin Diseases it has no equal.
BEWARE of NEW YORK COUNTERFEITS.
Sold under the name of "Holloway & Co., by J. F. Henry, Curran & Co., Druggists, and also by the Metropolitan Medicine Company of New York, with an assumed trademark thus Again one Joseph Davidock of New York, likewise passes off counterfeits of his own make under the name of Holloway & Co., having for a trade mark a Crescent and Serpent. McKesson & Robbin of New York are agents for the same.
These persons, the better to deceive you unlustiningly Caution the Public in the small books of directions affied to their Medicines, which are really the spurious imitations, to Beware of Counterfeits.
Unscrupulous Dealers obtain them at very low prices and sell these to the public in Canada as my genuine Pills and Ointment.
I most earnestly and respectfully appeal to the Clergy, to Mothers of Families and other ladies, and to the public generally of British North America, that they may be pleased to denounce unsparingly these frauds.
Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are the Counterfeits.
Each Pot and Box of the Genuine Medicines bears the British Government Stamp, with the name of "HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT," thereon. On the label is the address, 533, Oxford street, London, where alone they are Manufactured.
Parties who may be defrauded by Vendors selling spurious "Holloway's Pills and Ointment," as of my genuine make, shall on communicating the particulars to me, be amply remunerated, and their names never devulged. Signed.
THOMAS HOLLOWAY.

THURSDAY EVNG, AUG. 1, 1878.

IN THE COUNTRY.

Here at rest and calmly sleeping.
See the dead in silence all,
Waiting for the "Resurrection,"
Waiting for Jehovah's call

Some were with us in the Spring time,
With us mid the bright and gay;
Some were with us in the summer—
Now they've passed from earth away.

And those mounds on which I'm gazing,
Where roses twine and flowers wave,
Bright'ning death's gloom around me,
Mark our loved one's lonely grave.

"In memoriam" those white slabs rearing
Their sunny heads so high,
As if to heaven they'd fain be towering,
Teach us soon that we, too, must die.

Softly now the zephyrs blowing,
Wave the grass above their tomb,
All unconscious, still they rest on,
Emblems of eternal bloom.

But when from out the vaulted sky,
"Arise" a mighty voice shall cry,
The grave shall ope her gloomy door,
And death shrink back—her triumph o'er.

A JAPANESE FUNERAL.

THE BURIAL OF OKUBO, THE MURDERED HOME MINISTER.

The Japan Gazette says: A state funeral was decreed for a man than whom few had better deserved such posthumous honors, and 2 o'clock in the afternoon of May 17 was the hour fixed for the commencement of the ceremony. A walk along the line of march to be followed by the cortege, a couple of hours before it was to start, showed that the Prefect of Police and his subordinates had taken every precaution to secure order among the spectators, and to guard against the barest possibility of any outrage on the part of any suppositious friends or comrades of the murderers. A force of three thousands police had been detailed for the duty of guarding the streets along which the funeral should pass in the two miles and a half of its progress between the Minister's house in Urakasumigaseki, and the tomb on the slope of Awoyama. Crowds of people thronged the streets along the route, and every spot likely to afford a good view of the procession was occupied. The upper rooms of tea-houses and shops appeared to have been eagerly hired. The cortege, which took in all about three-quarters of an hour to pass a given spot, was thus formed: A mounted inspector of police leading, followed by a guard of nine sergeants also on horseback, a regiment of carbineers, a detachment of engineers, thirty-four buglers, the band of the Kiododans. Then came Genera Nodzu of Kumamoto fame, and now commanding the Tokio garrison, riding at the head of two battalions of infantry, followed by a battery of mountain guns. After this escort of military came the actual funeral cortege and its accessories. First, twenty misaki trees, decorated with red and white silk flags and banners of colored silk, borne in double line by attendants draped in purest white. Three Shinto priests on horseback, and the chief mourner, the High Priest Hirayama, in a carriage—all, too, in white—came next, and were followed by a native band of ten musicians, who immediately preceded the coffin. This was carried by relays of twenty white-robed coolies. The outer case was made of hinoki, tastily carved and ornamented. It was nine feet in length, six feet wide, and six high. Within this was laid the coffin proper, a shell of kiri two inches thick, in which Okubo had been placed in a recumbent and not sitting posture. After the coffin carriers came the sword and shoe bearers of the deceased, carrying a resemblance of his decorations, his sword, and a complete suit of court dress, which was put into the grave with the body. Immediately after two more attendants, also in white, and bearing bouquets of flowers, came the sons of the deceased, in three carriages. In the foremost was seated the young kadzu, the eldest son of the Minister, followed by his five brothers in the other vehicles. Then came about one hundred carriages of all kinds and descriptions; first a dozen or so containing the colleagues of the deceased and other high officials. Then the two princes, Arisugawa and Fushimi, each in a separate equipage, and next the foreign Ministers in the uniform of their order, in their turn followed by officials, native and foreign, and a number of friends and admirers of the departed, of various nationalities and of various ranks, in carriages and jinrikishas and on horseback. The Chinese representative so far surmounted his national prejudices as to appear in a "one horse shay" of a ramshackle kind, with a wretched pony driven by an untidy betto, and with a celestial attendant perched uneasily on the ends of the incommodious springs. The rear was closed by a battalion of infantry, a battery of artillery, and a mounted detachment of the commissariat train. At about 3:15 the head of the cortege arrived at the cemetery in Minamincho, Sanchome, Awoyama. A salute of ten cannon was then fired. The family and relations of the late Minister, the Daijin Sangi, Foreign Ministers, and others took their seats in a temporary building which had been prepared for their accomodation. The coffin having been set down before the structure, seven Shinto priests, Hirayama at their head, read a prayer, during which the mourners, one by one, burned incense by the body. This ceremony lasted about half an hour. When it was concluded, another salute of ten guns was fired, and all the guests dispersed, with the exception of the immediate relatives of the dead. These remained to offer and hear some final prayers, and, when those were over, the coffin was lowered into the grave. This is really a tomb, being fifteen feet deep, twelve feet square, and lined with stone on all the four sides. The coffin was covered with a thick layer of charcoal, on which were superimposed ten slabs of stone exactly fitting the grave, which was then filled in and covered with earth. Above this house of death was then erected a wooden post, a foot wide on each side and ten feet high, on which were inscribed the name, titles, and services of the deceased. The framework of a gate was then erected. The coachman and the two horses which shared the cruel fate of the Minister are buried hard by the body of their master.

SUMMER COMPLAINTS OR CHOLERA INFANTUM, which is carrying off the infants and children by the thousand at this season of the year, can always surely be checked and cured by Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It has never failed to give immediate relief in the most severe cases. It is a boon within the reach of every mother. Do not fail to give it a trial; you will be pleased with its charming effects. For sale by all dealers. Milburn, Bentley & Pearson, Toronto.

EDISON'S EARLY TIFE.

This remarkable inventor, of whom the public has recently heard so much, is still a young man, having been born in 1847 at Milan, Erie County, Ohio. His mother was of Scotch parentage, but born in Massachusetts; she was finely educated, literary and ambitious, and had been a teacher in Canada. Young Edison's only schooling came from his mother, who taught him spelling, reading and writing, and arithmetic. He lost his mother in 1863, but his father, a man of vigorous constitution, is still living aged 74. When he was seven years old, his parents removed to Port Huron, Michigan. The boy disliked mathematics, but was fond of reading, and, before he was twelve years old, had read the "Penny Cyclopædia," Hume's "England," and Gibbon's "Rome." He early took to the railroad, and became a newsboy on the Grand Trunk line, running into Detroit. Here he had access to a library, which he undertook to read through; but, after skimming over many hundred miscellaneous books, he adopted the plan of select reading on subjects of interest to him. Becoming interested in chemistry, he bought some chemicals, and fixed up a laboratory in one of the cars. An unfortunate combustion of phosphorus one day came near setting fire to the train, and the consequence was, that the conductor kicked the whole thing out. He had obtained the exclusive right to sell papers on the road, and employed for assistance, but not satisfied with this, he bought a lot of second-hand type, and printed on the cars a little paper of his own, called the Grand Trunk Herald. Getting acquainted with the telegraph operators along the road, he took a notion to become an operator himself. In his lack of means and opportunities, he resorted to the expedient of making his own apparatus at home. A piece of stove-wire, insulated by bottles, was made to do service as the line-wire. The wire for his electro magnets he wound with rags, and in a similar way persevered until he had the crude elements of a telegraph, but the electricity being wanting, and as he could not buy a battery, he tried rubbing the fur of cats' backs, but says that electricity from this source was a failure for telegraphic purposes.—From "Sketch of T. A. Edison" in Popular Science Monthly for August.

The New Governor General.

John Campbell, the Marquis of Lorne, is to succeed the Earl of Dufferin as Governor General of Canada. The new ruler is thirty-three, handsome and scholarly. He is the oldest son of one of Scotland's most ancient families—the Argyle Campbells. His chief distinction lies in the fact that he married, seven years ago, the Princess Louise, fourth daughter of Queen Victoria. To this marriage, and its disagreeable concomitants, the Marquis doubtless owes his present promotion. For the path of a subject who weds a princess, even though he be the heir of the Duke of Argyle, and she as sweet and lovable as is Louise, is rarely strewn with roses alone. Is there a state banquet or levee—the Princess is swept in on the arm of some stolid seventy-second ruler of a square league of German soil, and the husband compelled to cool his heels outside, and slink in later with the common crowd of Marquises, Earls and Viscounts. Does the Shah of Persia, the Sultan of Mozambique, or the Lalla Rookh with Two Swords visit London—the wife meets the illustrious stranger on terms of equality while the poor Marquis is brought in with the cheese in the role of an honest but poverty-stricken and inferior relative. These are some of the annoyances of public or parade life. The troubles of a private existence are no less wearing or multitudinous. Court usages make an absolute gulf between the twain, which must be incessantly irksome to both. It is to lessen this that the Marquis of Lorne and his wife came to Canada. Here, by virtue of his rank, he will be the first dignitary in the Dominion, and his royal consort can be no higher. Occupying the same rank, they can have a court of their own and be troubled no more by questions of precedence and quality. Politically, the move has a two-fold advantage to the Government. It binds Canada closer to the Empire by giving the Dominion a Marquis instead of an Earl, and a Royal Princess in place of a Countess, in its vicegeral residence; and it wins to the aide and support of the Ministry, a powerful Liberal Peer—the Duke of Argyle.—Utica Observer.

A Letter from a Clergyman
Vernonville, Sept. 8th, 1876.
Messrs. Milburn, Bentley & Pearson.
GENTLEMEN,—Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has cured the worst case of summer Complaint I ever knew. Our little child was, for one month, not expected to recover. We got medicine from our family physician, but, like everything else, it failed, until we tried Dr. Fowler's Great Cure, Extract of Wild Strawberry, which acted like a charm, and perfectly cured the infant in less than three days.
Yours faithfully,
Rev. S. R. KEARNS.
