

JOSH MILLING'S COUGH-DRIVE.

The philosopher, John Milling, has placed in the hands of the editors of the Farmer's Almanac 1878. From its pages we are permitted to make the following extract:—Josh, is summering at the Glens Falls, White Mountain, and the trout are growing fewer every day:

Hucksters are always a braggart on their freedom—freedom to dam their own stockings and ponds, those own skins I had rather be a swindler once in 2 years, regain than now be a grampus old, half dead huckster, only for ninety days.

Ambition few share in this; it is a sure way to put a man's kandell all out.

Sucking a whig-silphub thus a ring straw is a good deal like trying to live by chance.

Sum people won't believe anything they kant prove; the things I can't prove are the very things I kant the most.

Good-examples saving us rulers, are the best laws they enact.

One or the another night or all to me is an out-and-out desert, and deserted, whom I kant living in ease and luxury.

His wife spends his younger days in dissipating in moneymaking himself new drosses and poverty two inexorable creditors, who are certain to foreclose at last, and take possession of the premises.

The world over all its energy is given in few luxuries—digging roots for breakfast and good health, which is the virtuous way of life, or a lazy savage.

A dash in love is just about as bad as a tick or a malitia kandy that has half melted.

There is no good substitute for wisdom but silence is the best that has been discovered yet.

There is lots o' folks in this world who, rather than sink and die, will at all wouldn't hesitate to say, few an angel worm that his tail was altogether too long for the rest o' his body.

A man is a good company for himself if he's always company for others.

Cunning is very apt to outwit itself, the man who turns the boat over and got under it kewt out of the rain was one of this kind.

I never knew but one infidel in my life, and he had no more courage than a huffed drotten jest went off with a swill barrel, and was as afraid tew drowd as the devil would be if he was allowed tew visit the earth for a short season to recruit his strength.

A man is the most afraid o' he sex he don't believe in; this may account for sum man's unbelief in hell.

The man who dies the richest is the one who leaves the least here and takes the most with him.

Mitchell's Whig improved India Rubber when the heating of so many different dices as were caused by outward application as the present. It is an undisputed fact that over half of the entire population of India wear a coat of ordinary plasters. They are very soft and pliable, still very adhesive; and are a sure cure for Weak Bladder, Piles in the Stomach and Bowels, and are also good for the Cough of cold and standing, and often prevent Consumption. Some even tell us they believe they were entirely caused by the use of them or some other article of diet.
