A. A. Mellier, Washington Av., City. — Dear Mellier: I have for some years been troubled with Catarrh, and for the past two years have suffered seriously with it. Noticing your advantagement of Banford's Remedy (Radical Curs.), I decided to try it. I have used only two bottles; and as a result. I feel so much relieved that I presume on our personal relations and write this to you and ask that you take some measures to get it more prominently before the public, that others may have each seller as I have. I have recommended it to quite a number of my friends, all of whom have expressed to metheir high estimate of its value and good effects with them. with them.

I really think it particularly adapted to wants of St. Louis people, and they all ought to know of it, and those who need it should try it. I will risk the assertion that 1000 1 oz. vials (as a sample) to be given away will sell as many bottles.

Try some plan. Let the people have it; they need it. I believe I could sell 5000 bettles myself—of course you could largely increase this number. why not try it? Yours truly, WM. BOWEN

FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH.

The Rev H. H. Waters, of New Orleans, while spending his summer vocation at Mon-treal, received tidings of the outbreak of the yellow fever amongst his parishioners. He hastly returned to New Orleans, his only plea being, "My people need me." "My people need me!" at the word
Shrank not the servant of the Lord.
The shadow of the maple trees, The pleasant roices of the breeze,
The thousand soft, refreshing dreams That haunt us by the summer streams, All were forgotten in the cry.
My people sicken, suffer, die!

Girt as the dauntless Volunteer,
Who starts the bugle's note to hear.
Then girds his good sword on his side
For God and right in battle's tide.
So passed this sollier of the Cross.
Giad for his sake to suffer loss; Who, for him and his people dear. Shrank not from Cross, or thorn, or spear. Fo stand beside the dying bed. Between the living and the dead:

Half way amidst the Jorden's roll Chasing the shadows from the soul-Speaking of death ess streams of life That slake the fever's burning strife Gone, the forlors hope to lead on Through death to palm and victory Oh. Good Physicians ! Thou dost know The antidote to every woe. Stand by Thy servant in the hour Of pestilential wrath and power.

As Thou dost nerve the brave for strife, Aidhim who yields to Thee his life And listen to our earnest prayer, His people need him; spare, oh, spare

He was a very fair appeari parently about forty, though she might have been a little older. He was dressed in black and, wearing a high hat, he might have passed very well for one of the cloth, if his nose hadn't been a trifle luminous. The other peculiarity I mo-ticed about the man was that he had a queer sort of a red looking eye. It appeared fixed and staring, and, as he came nearer, I concluded it was glass. It was so strong and unnatural in its expression that I thought I should know it of I should see it peering at me over the great wall of China. Have you read the Evening Chronicle?'

And after this abrupt interrogation, the stranger stood quite motionless, eyeing the agent intently, for as much as a

We both answered No. The man took a paper out of his pocket, and spreading it open before us put out one of his slender forefingers apon the following paragraph:
'FATAL ACCIDENT. -This afternoon as two men, named respectively Henry Van Scoter and C. H. Griggs, were at work chopping timber in the pineries near Scranton, a tree fell upon them, killing Van Scoter instantly, and inflicting in-

Henry Van Scoter was my only brother-my twin brother-who resembled me very much, and Charley Griggs my sister's husband. It's a sad blow! a sad blow! I don't know how my poor mater will bear it. It's about this and affair that I came here chiefly. I want to send the two bodies through to G-by express Thursday, by the 11:40 train.
