Two boats rocked on the river. In the shadow of leaf and tree. One was in love with the other. One was in love with the other.

The one that loved the harbor. The whole of its existence. But held the other, laughing. Forever against the shore.

The one that roams on the river. In the shadow of leaf and tree. With a thousand words on its tongue. To the one far out at sea.

The one that roams on the river. Though sailing fair and fast. Looks back to the unloved river. To the harbor safe and sweet.

One that roams on the river. Of the moon-grown shaded shore. One that roams on the river. That harbor's no more.
