In Paris where she generally lives, her name is associated with many acts of generosity. She does good whenever opportunity offers, and always, if possible, in a purely private way. When money is needed, she is one of the first called upon, and she never refuses to give - and give liberally. Many women who have been far more correct, conventionally have nothing like the humanity and warmth of affection that Isabel, despite the scandal in which she has been involved, has uniformly evinced. She has a decided liking for Americans, and talks of visiting this country some time. Her ideas of its geography are some what confused. She recently saked if Cazoo (Peru) was not opposite New-
