rister) prosecuted. In opening the case he said that the girl in question was Leah Capland, daughter of Joseph Capland, residing in Bankestreet, Red Bank, and was born in February, 1863, when the family were residing in Russia. The defendant lived near to them, and a slight acquaintance had existed between the parties, although the fether was ignorant of any interthe father was ignorant of any intercourse. On the morning of the 30th October the defendant asked the girl, she being at the time fifteen years of age, to A single plaster costs but 25 cents, and in go with him to be registered. In the many instances especially shen intended for Jewish persuasion there was a ceremony of betrothal antecedent to marriage, and the girl imagined that, she was to be betrothed. They vent together to the registry office in New Bridge street, and there were actually married in the presence of witnesses. On coming out the defendant asked her whether she knew that she was married to him, and she was utterly astonished, going back to her father's house. On Saturday evening the defendant went there and claimed his wife, but her father refused to give her up. The defendant had committed perjury by making a false declaration at the marriage that the Croup, when used in its early stages, and for girl was 21 years old, and the contention of the prosecution was that he had "taken away" the girl sgainst the consent and For such ailments as these it is warranted to will of her father. The father having be superior to any known remedy. stated that the ceremony was performed against his wish, he being in perfect ignorance of the matter, a witness gave evidence respecting the marriage. In reply to the defendant, he said that the girl told the registrar that she wished to be of the above statements to consult some reli married, as she had a bad stepmother, and that had she not wished to marry Holstein she would not have been courting him for the last five years.
