What things are coming to. That men upon their bosoms wear A silken strip of blue? Oh. brother, say what can it mean This foolish fashion new: That some who always were the green Replace it with the blue.

Yes, brother, these blue badges mean The freedom of the soul Of him who in the past has been. The slave of alcohol. False friends may chide and turn aside; But friendship new and true Will greet the hero, true and tried,

Fair name and length of days, And hopes and joys of life that come A thousand different ways; And when his corpse is 'neath the sod His friends will call him true To home, to country, and to God, Because he wore the blue.

Think not the blue means aught of wrong To wearers of the green: It labors hard to make them strong; And keep their senses keen; Nor need our colors be apart. If each to each is true, We'll bear the green within the heart
