A DOLERUL PICTURE. The Quebec Parliam mentary correspondent of the Noveau Monde gives the following deleful picture of the morals and manners at Quebec, and from the fact that it is copied into the editorial columns of a Quebec paper without note or comment, there is reason to believe that the picture is a true one. 'In Quebec the houses are encumbered with their inhabitants. From three o'click in the afternoon until late at night, a shameless crowd insult peaceful and honest people.
