A Zoological Battle.

PERIBLE FIGHT OF ENRAGED BRARS.

at the Zoological Gardens in the Fair grounds yesterday between two of the bears confined in the bear-pits. The began with growls and whines, and proachful cries, and imprecations, followed by blows and heavy sparring. At length both bears became thoroughly enraged, and stanting on their hind legs, they prepared for the deadly duel. Several rounds were fought, and at the fifth the big bear seized the little one around the waist, and throwing him over his bead, fell heavily upon him. The little one now got the big one's ear, in his mouth and tore away wearly the whole of it. This so exasperated the giant that he festened his teeth upon his adversary's left paw and whirled him around with the velocity of a whirliging. When he refeased his hold both bears were pretty nearly exhausted. After a few minutes rest the light war renewed, but it was soon ended. The little one was blind and bleeding at the mouth, and was evidently on his last legs. As he lay on his back, penting and whining, the other bear approached to make a finish, and received a heavy slap on the mouth, which drew blood. The big one then sprang upon him, and, seizing him by the throat with his teeth, while he blood him tightly in his emprace, held clasped him tightly in his emprace, held on until life was extinct. The aurvivor was fearfully punished, being lame in two legs, with enough hair missing from his back to stuff a cushion, - St. Louis
